PREFACE.

THE PLEASURES OF MEMORY have been sweetly sung by a modern bard, and perhaps in no case are those pleasures greater than when connected with the religious experiences of our better nature. An unpretending volume, like this, presents no claim to public notice, but appeals to that narrower circle whose sympathies are enlisted, and whose interest is excited, by a recital of the trials, the progress, and the triumphs of God's people. No striking events are here recorded; no stirring scenes will pass in review before the reader. We only attempt to tell, in a simple way, how the Good Shepherd has led one of his flocks, and to chronicle such events as have had an influence upon the destiny of immortal spirits. The mission of the modern church is to diffuse a knowledge of Christ, to teach men the truth of his Holy Word, and thus to fit them for life and duty here, and for glory, honor, and immortality hereafter. Without claiming for this church any preëminence, it was thought that a brief record of its past history would be deeply interesting to all who have, at any time, been identified with it; and perhaps there may be others to whom our little memorial may not be altogether destitute of attractions. Such as it is, we send it forth, conscious that it might have been far worthier of its theme, but still trusting that it may meet a kindly reception from many a Christian heart.

The matter accumulated by the committee in collecting the materials for this work, would fill several volumes, and continual abridgment has been necessary to keep within the limits prescribed to us. In consequence of this, the narrative may appear quite abrupt at some points, and it must be ascribed to the cause just stated. The writers have not forgotten that their duty has been to give facts, rather than to furnish reflections upon them; and this may give the work an uninviting appearance; but this, we think, will be readily overlooked, when we state that our aim has been to secure accuracy in all our statements; and it is believed that our facts and figures may be relied on.

It is somewhat remarkable that our first pastor, and the first deacon of the church, both departed this life during the preparation of this work. Fortunately, however, these aged and venerable brethren furnished us with all the facts in their possession before they passed away. We have received valuable information also from Deacons H. Phelps, D. Bailie, R. E. Peterson, B. M. Thompson, and Wm. D. Mangam; and from Mrs. Ann Elgreen and Mrs. Hannah Ashford.

A Register of our entire membership will be found at the close of the book. It was intended, at first, to give the names of present members only; but a strong desire having been expressed to have all inserted, the committee yielded, though much additional and unexpected labor was thereby imposed upon them. The time and manner of uniting with the church are also given, together with the date of death or dismissal; so that every member may now ascertain these facts in his own history, or that of any brother or sister. It is not unlikely that errors have escaped notice in so large a collection of names and dates, and hence we desire that persons noticing such defects, would communicate the same to the pastor or clerks. Any other corrections or suggestions may also be addressed to C. B. Stout, box 1478, New York post-office, or to Thomas J. Grout, 145 Suffolk street, New York.

We desire, before closing this preface, to allude to the harmony that has ever prevailed among our membership and attended our councils. With one or two exceptions, this has been the case from the beginning until now. In our church meetings, personal choice and feeling are ever in abeyance to the general good, and the will of the majority is cheerfully assented to. This fact is a cause of devout gratitude to God, and not only has frequent allusion to it been had in our letters to the Association, but it is often made the occasion of thanksgiving in the prayer-room. May the great Head of the Church continue to preserve the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace !

OF THE

STANTON STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.

PERIOD I.

FROM ORIGIN TO CALL OF REV. GEORGE BENEDICT.

OCTOBER 3D, 1823—APRIL 20TH, 1831.

THE beginnings of churches, like the commencement of some of our noble American rivers, are frequently small and obscure; but in their onward progress they increase in strength, expand in volume, and command the attention of large communities. Within the limits of an ordinary lifetime, and, indeed, within the recollection of many persons still living, the events here recorded have transpired. And it is with devout thanksgiving to the Father of spirits that this memorial of his blessing upon the labors of his people is prepared. It is a history of peaceful advance and quiet increase, through scenes of sorrow and discouragement as well as of comfort and of joy.

In the latter part of the year 1823, a number of members in good standing in the Mulberry street Church, New York, expressed a wish to be dismissed, for the purpose of constituting a new church in another part of the city. After considering their request, the following letter was granted them :

“TO ALL WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This is to certify that the brethren and sisters whose names are hereunto affixed are hereby regularly dismissed from the Baptist Church in Mulberry street, New York, under the pastoral care of Rev. Archibald Maclay, for the purpose of uniting together in the formation of a new and regular Baptist Church in the same city. And may the great Head of the church crown their efforts with success, and his rich and effective blessing; that they may be built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone.

“Done by order of the church.

“John Hazlet,	Michael Noe,
Zilpah Hazlet,	Elizabeth Noe,
Jane Hazlet,	Wm. B. Swift,
Stephen Hyde,	Charlotte Blakely,
Catharine Hyde,	Catharine Clark,

Catharine Patillo,	Hannah Ashford.”

Immediately on receiving this letter, these brethren procured a place to meet in, at No. 63 Chrystie street, then far up town, and they had public worship the ensuing Sunday, brother John W. Gibbs being the preacher. It was resolved to engage brother Gibbs at the salary of $200 per annum, but they subsequently voted fifty dollars additional. A council of the various pastors of the Baptist churches in the city was convened at the house of brother Noe, Oct. 3d, when the new church submitted their Articles of Faith and Covenant. The Council, composed of Rev. A. Maclay, Rev. C. G. Somers, Rev. Johnson Chase, Rev. John Williams, and Rev. Mr. Smith, after due deliberation, resolved unanimously that the brethren and sisters should be recognized as a regular Baptist Church. The Council then adjourned to the meeting-house, when a sermon was preached by Rev. C. G. Somers, and the hand of fellowship was given by Rev. A. Maclay. The new body assumed the name of The Union Baptist Church, and was constituted as follows :

John Hazlet,	Wm. B. Swift,
Zilpah Hazlet,	Charlotte Blakely,
Jane Hazlet,	Catharine Clark,
Stephen Hyde,	Mary Cheeseman,

* The last two names were added to the original number,

Articles of Faith.

We whose names are here subjoined having a desire to unite ourselves in the bonds of the Gospel, that we may be enabled to fulfill the ordinances of Christ, and those duties toward each other which the Lord himself has enjoined on all his followers, conceive as a preliminary step, that our views of the doctrines of the Lord and his ordinances as we believe them set forth in his word, should be committed to paper, that no individual who may have his name recorded may plead ignorance of the fact.

ARTICLE 1.—We believe the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be the word of God, given by inspiration, and that they are to be our only rule of faith and practice.

ARTICLE 2.—There is but one living and true God, who is the creator, upholder, and preserver making six males and nine females. The name of Mrs. Patillo seems to have been omitted by a clerical error. Mrs. Hannah Ashford, and Mrs. Ann Elgreen are the only constituent members remaining with us at the close of 1859. Both have been widows for many years.

of all things (sin excepted), the only King of kings and Lord of lords; and that lawful adoration can be paid to him alone: the disposer of all events and things visible and invisible; and that in the Godhead there are three persons, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, the same in essence, power, might, majesty and dominion.

ARTICLE 3.—God made man in his own image, free from sin, placed him in a state of happiness, gave him a law to govern his actions, and condescended to hold communion with him: that man being in honor abode not, but transgressed the law, fell from a state of innocence and entailed the curse of God on all his posterity, of which he stood the representative.

ARTICLE 4.—That before the foundation of the world, the eternal God, seeing that man by his disobedience would become a curse on the earth, and totally depraved, devised a plan of deliverance, through his Son Jesus Christ, who became the author of eternal salvation to all his chosen, agreeably to Ephesians, 1st chap., 4th and 5th verses.

ARTICLE 5.—According to the determination of God, the Saviour made his appearance as mediator, and after having fulfilled the law, suffered the penalty for his guilty people, that they might not only be delivered from the curse of the law and their bondage to sin, but be likewise partakers of his heavenly glory.

ARTICLE 6.—It is God alone, without the intervention of man, that produces a change in the sinner's heart, whereby he is enabled to see his sinful, lost, and ruined condition, and by faith to lay hold of the Lord Jésus as an all-sufficient Saviour; and being thus renewed and justified by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, will be preserved in a state of grace until death, and then be received into glory.

ARTICLE 7.—That the ordinances of the Gospel to be observed by all professing Christians, are Baptism, and the Lord's Supper; to be administered to such only as have made a profession of his name, and their faith in Christ.

ARTICLE 8.—For a right administration of the ordinance of Baptism it is necessary that the individual be completely immersed in water by a person duly qualified.

ARTICLE 9.—The ordinance of the supper to be observed on the first day of the week, the elements to be bread and wine, the officiator to be an ordained Baptist minister, and none but baptized believers to be partakers thereof.

ARTICLE 10.—We believe that there will be a general judgment at the last day, when the Lord Jesus will descend from heaven with a shout and with the voice of the Archangel and the trump of God, revealing himself in flaming fire, taking vengeance on those that know not God, and that everlasting destruction from his presence will be the portion of their cup, while at the same time he will be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe, and take them to himself into the mansions of eternal rest prepared for them before the foundation of the world.

ARTICLE 11.—Believing ourselves to be imperfect creatures, liable to err in the grand truths of the Gospel, we have thought proper to state that if anything in these articles should hereafter appear to clash with the word of God, the same is left open for amendment, two-thirds of the members concurring therein.

COVENANT.—Having mutually given ourselves to each other and the Lord, we do also agree to the articles herein contained.

Praying that the great Head of the Church will watch over us, and direct our councils, and guide our feet in the way of righteousness, and through grace enable us to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace, we do hereby subscribe our names.

John Hazlet was chosen church clerk, and on the 26th of October brother Noe was elected deacon, "without opposition." Letters of dismission were presented from time to time, not only from Mulberry street but from the First Baptist Church, in Gold street, then and for many years under the pastoral care of Rev. Wm. Parkinson. On Lord's day, Nov. 2nd, Ann Hulse was proposed for baptism, and she was the first believer baptized into the fellowship of the newly formed church. It was soon ascertained that the salary of brother Gibbs was not sufficient for his support, but as the little flock felt unable to increase it, they voted, on the 30th of November, to release him from his engagement, and to procure such gratuitous supplies as they could. After brother Gibbs resigned, they had preaching by Messrs. Williams, Chase, Martin, and Hawley of Brooklyn; but the congregation did not increase, in consequence of the uncertainty in supplying the pulpit. Brother Noe was frequently called to speak on Lord's day morning, and the church appeared much edified thereby. The brethren were united, and peace and comfort seemed to be enjoyed by all the members.

Overtures were made to the Rev. Mr. Martin, but as he had accepted a call to Staten Island, the church turned their attention to Mr. Hawley, but failing to secure his services, the pulpit continued to be supplied through the exertions of the brethren. On the 16th of April, 1824, they voted a license to Deacon Noe to preach the Gospel, and soon afterward (April 23d) they chose Andrew Seger and Frederick Patillo as deacons. About this time the Church moved to the school-room over the watch-house, in Eldridge street, but the entrance was disagreeable, and the surroundings decidedly unpleasant. It was difficult to get ministers to preach in this room, and the brethren were compelled to make other arrangements. At this point in their history, Mr. Chase called their attention to the Rev. Samuel Eastman, of Kentucky, who had been preaching for Rev. A. Maclay, in Mulberry street, for a time, and Mr. E. was invited to preach for them. He did so with great acceptance, and it was unanimously agreed to give him a call to become the pastor of the church. This call was accepted, and brother Eastman entered upon his labors in the summer of 1824. In July, they voted—unanimously, as usual—to connect themselves with the Hudson River Association, and that vote has never been recalled to this day. The number of members at this time was only twenty-four.

The Rev. Samuel Eastman was born at Landaff, Grafton Co., New Hampshire, October 1st, 1788. The early part of his life was spent at home in agricultural pursuits, and in the district schools and academies in the vicinity. From a very early period he had a passionate fondness for books, and of course he eagerly read all that he could obtain. These aided greatly in expanding his mind and preparing him for that field of usefulness which he was destined one day to enter. At the close of the war, in 1815, being then twenty-seven years of age, he undertook a journey to the western country, visiting Cincinnati, Columbus, etc. While in Urbana County he was attacked with "the long fever," as it was then called, and for forty days his life was despaired of. A year passed before he recovered sufficiently to leave the place. But this long and painful visitation was not without its influence upon his future course, for there his deep convictions of sin commenced, and his restless anxiety for the things that perish was changed into an abiding concern for the things that endure to eternity. He now descended the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers to Natchez, where he formed a partnership with the Rev. Benjamin Davis, in conducting a large school on the then popular Lancasterian system. The enterprise was highly successful, but it failed to satisfy the mind of Mr. Eastman. On the 13th of April, 1817, he was baptized in the Mississippi River, "where there is much water," by Elder Davis. He was almost immediately summoned by the church to exercise his gifts with a view to the ministry, and he soon after received a temporary license to preach the Gospel. Though long a careful Bible reader, he yet felt unprepared to enter fully into the work without further study and preparation. He accordingly left Natchez for Philadelphia, cheered by the commendations and blessings of the church. On his way he preached several times for the kind-hearted Reynoldson, of New Orleans, and afterward in New York, for "good old Father Williams, of blessed memory." At Philadelphia he placed himself at once under the instruction of Dr. Staughton, pastor of the Sansom street Church, and widely known as an eloquent pulpit orator. Uniting with the Sansom street Church, brother Eastman enjoyed the tuition of its revered pastor for nearly two years, and preached under his direction from time to time. Besides the advantages to be derived from the instructions of so kind and capable a teacher, the treasures of his large and well-selected library were open to the student, and he also became acquainted with the order and discipline of a large, intelligent, and well-regulated church. Brother Eastman was set apart to the full work of the ministry by ordination, September 22d, 1818, the customary services being conducted by Dr. Wm. Staughton, Rev. James McLaughlin, Rev. John Peckworth, Rev. Richard Proudfoot and Rev. Ira Chase. Having received an appointment from the Baptist Board for Foreign Missions to labor in the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, he returned to Natchez, preached there some time, and at other places on "the father of waters," and finally settled at Natchitoches, on the Red River. There he preached the first Protestant sermon ever delivered in the place. Brother E.'s knowledge of public instruction was of use to him in this field, for though people were willing to hear but one sermon a week, they gladly paid the preacher $2,000 per annum for superintending their seminary. This enabled him to labor without drawing on the Missionary Board for his support. But the climate was against him. He had passed through the ordeal of the yellow fever at St. Francisville, and now he was prostrated again with an epidemic of that sickly latitude—delirium supervened, and it was thought that death was at hand. With his first convalescence he started for the North, on board of a steamer, and soon landed in Cincinnati. There the cause was at a low ebb; but he went to work again with a hopeful heart, preaching at first in a school-house, in the suburbs of the city, to a little party. But the congregation increased, the Spirit of the Lord was poured out, sinners were converted, great multitudes flocked to see them baptized in the Ohio, and a new meeting-house was built, paid for, and filled with a permanent congregation. But these severe labors proved too much for the already broken health of brother E., and he was compelled again to seek restoration. A year was passed in quiet at the Harrodsburg Springs, in Kentucky, with benefit, and he was still further strengthened by a long journey on horseback, in the month of March, from Harrodsburg, across the Alleghany Mountains, to Philadelphia. Thence he came to this city, and then began his acquaintance with the little Union Church.

Although brother Gibbs had served the body from its formation; yet, as he was not then an ordained minister, brother Eastman must be regarded as the first pastor of the church. Soon after his coming, efforts were made to secure lots on which to build a suitable meeting-house; but the brethren were still too weak to undertake so expensive an enterprise.

The minutes for the year 1824 conclude as follows:

“We have now closed the year; none of our members have left us, and but one has grieved us. He, however, has been brought to his right mind, and walks consistent with his profession. Brother Hazlet was chosen clerk for the year coming.”

There appears to have been no church meeting for business until March of the next year (1825). At this meeting brother Eastman's letter from the Simpson's Creek Church, Kentucky, was received, and the right hand of fellowship was given by brother Noe.* At the same meeting several other persons were received by letter from the Anthony street and Delancy street churches, and the church in Brooklyn.

For a short time the little band met in the school-room in Mott street ; but this was inconvenient, and, after vainly seeking a better location, they reluctantly returned to the watch-house. In June, however, an opportunity offered for securing a more favorable place in the Bowery, now Military Hall, and the new room was rented for $300 per year. The first case of discipline occurred in October, 1825, at the close of the second year of trial and patience on the part of the hopeful body of disciples, who were striving to sustain and diffuse light in a dark place. But their struggles were not yet over, and by June of the next year it was ascertained that they were in debt some $275. They accordingly notified their pastor and the owner of the room of their inability to pay them the amounts originally agreed upon. But with the beginning of the next year the prospect began to brighten, and for many months the little church was cheered by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. At the regular meeting, in January, 1827, Benjamin M. Thompson and three others related their Christian experiences, and were received as candidates for baptism. For some unexplained reason the baptism was deferred until Sunday, March 4th, when fourteen persons were immersed in the Hudson River, at ten o'clock A.M., near a gentleman's country-seat. The scene is represented as having been exceedingly impressive. The good work went forward, so that on the first of April the pastor baptized six persons more in the same place. Ten days afterward, the church listened to the experiences of seven converts—among whom were James Cowan, Octavius Winslow, Mrs. Margaret Wallace and Mary Cox; the last two are still members with us, after a lapse of nearly one-third of a century. The above, with nine others, were baptized in the Hudson, May 6th, at four o'clock P.M. On the 27th of September, brother Elijah B. Loomis was chosen deacon, and a letter of dismissal was granted to Mrs. Mary Winslow, to unite with Rev. Dr. Rippon's Church, in London. Brother Loomis departed this life in the spring of 1859, having been faithful and consistent unto death. Mrs. Winslow was born at St. George's, Bermuda, on the 28th of February, 1774, and it was on Tuesday evening, October 3d, 1854, that she entered into rest, closing her long pilgrimage of fourscore years with "a cloudless death." An interesting memoir of this estimable Christian lady has been prepared by her son, Octavius Winslow, D.D., and it has just been republished in this country. A letter was received from Dr. W. during the preparation of this work, expressing his continued attachment to the church, and undiminished interest in her welfare.

Brother Winslow was licensed to preach the Gospel at the church meeting in October, 1827, and the license was forwarded to him in England, where he was pursuing his studies.

In October, 1828, John Hazlet, Samuel Rust, and James Cowan, were chosen the first Board of Trustees, and on the 4th of November, brother Humphrey Phelps was chosen church clerk in place of brother Hazlet, who resigned the office. December 23d, 1829, brother Phelps was elected deacon (the church at that time celebrating the ordinance of the Lord's Supper in the evening), and in February, 1830, brother Phelps resigned the clerkship, and was succeeded by brother Timothy Evans, he being the third in that office. In May, for the first time, the harmony of the body was somewhat disturbed, and some of the older members "left the church in great disorder." But the brethren were faithful, and they proceeded promptly to discipline the offending members. Brother Evans resigning the clerkship in June, the church chose brother John L. Everett to succeed him.

The faithful still found opportunity to labor for souls, and their efforts were blessed. They reported to the Association fourteen baptisms, two receptions by experience, one by letter, three dismissions, and six withdrawals of the hand of fellowship, making their number one hundred and twenty-nine.

The pastor was now taken down with the small pox. This disease, however, had no sooner run its course than he was seized with the liver complaint, and then with bleeding at the lungs, the loss of his voice, and the complete prostration of his physical powers. "This," writes brother Eastman, "rendered it improbable that I should ever again be able to speak in public. Under these circumstances," he continues, "I left the city of New York a mere wreck of humanity, and directed my feeble steps toward the granite hills of New Hampshire, anxious to find a calm resting-place or a speedy grave in the peaceful shades of my native place."

Immediately after the resignation of brother Eastman, which took place on Wednesday evening, November 24th, 1830, the church began to look after another pastor. They however were compelled to change their place of meeting several times before they were in a condition to proceed in the divine work. After removing from Mott street, where they had worshiped about a year, they returned to the place in the Bowery where they had formerly met; but this was destroyed by fire before they had occupied it one month.* "They were then blessed," says their letter to the Association, "with an opportunity of meeting in a place in Elizabeth street, where Elder Miller's congregation had formerly met," and on the first of May they occupied the little meeting-house then standing on the corner of Houston and Forsyth streets.

For the space of two years, brother Eastman's prostration continued. He gradually recovered, however, and in the third year he began to preach occasionally; and in the fifth, being urged to do so, he consented to take the pastoral charge of the church in Rutland, Vermont, for one year. After remaining here eighteen months, he labored with the Grafton Church, with which he united by letter from Stanton street. He then labored about four years with the Haverhill and Meredith Village churches, in New Hampshire, spending about half the time with each.

Brother Eastman was for the last thirteen years of his life a resident of Wisconsin, where, to use his own words, he "preached here and there in the new country as opportunity offered, but re-house, after the burning of their place of worship in the Bowery.

fusing, on account of poorness of health, to take the pastoral charge of any church. I am now," he wrote shortly before his death, "in the sixty-ninth year of my age, blessed with an easy competence of the good things of this life, constantly reminded of my approaching dissolution by infirmities of body, calmly waiting the will of God till my change shall come, confidently relying on the merits of Christ for the salvation of my soul, turning off my thoughts from this troublesome world, and looking forward to the wonderful disclosures of the world to come."

For some months preceding his departure, brother Eastman's health had been unusually good, and his correspondence with us afforded him evident satisfaction. His last illness was only of a fortnight's duration, but he met death with fortitude and serenity. A few months previous to his last sickness, the pulpit of the Baptist Church in Elkhorn, Wisconsin, the place of his residence, became vacant, and he offered to fill it gratuitously on condition that the amount of salary be devoted to repairing and improving the house of worship. He appeared very desirous to promote the religious interests of the community in which his closing days were passed, and his earnestness in the pulpit was ably seconded by a series of energetic articles in the local press, all presenting the importance and necessity of a religious life. In the midst of these labors, his last illness commenced; a severe cold following his final effort in the pulpit. From the beginning he was impressed that this sickness would be unto death, and he made all his arrangements accordingly. He died on Saturday, April 17th, 1858, having almost completed his pilgrimage of three score years and ten. His departure was at sunset—one of those glorious western sunsets—of a calm, bright, beautiful day. His last moments were unattended with pain, and he passed gently to his rest. “As I turned (writes his son-in-law) from witnessing his sinking away, the sun was just disappearing in the golden west.” A large concourse gathered in the Baptist church, where he had so recently officiated, on Monday, at ten o’clock A.M., and the funeral sermon was preached by Elder Bright, from Ecclesiastes, ix. 10. Other clergymen participated in the services, and then the remains were attended to the railroad station by the citizens of Elkhorn. The four resident ministers of the place and four deacons accompanied to Rochester, where, after singing by the choir, and appropriate remarks by Rev. R. R. Snow, Congregational minister of Waterford, the body was committed to its kindred dust. His death was appropriately noticed in the papers of his vicinity, by those in Ohio, and in this city. One of the Elkhorn editors remarks: "His friends will miss the familiar voice and gray hairs in the home circle. The young minister and the young professor who were wont to go to him, will miss his words of wisdom and consolation in the hour of trouble. All will miss him."

From a notice in the "American Baptist," we quote the following passage: "He died with a sermon undelivered, which he had prepared for an interesting occasion." *

"Elder Eastman was a man of vigorous intellect, of practical mind, of varied talent, and of sterling integrity. As a preacher, he was argumentative, instructive and forcible—often feeling and eloquent. As a writer, he possessed strong powers of condensation, presenting much in brief space and forcible terms.

“Severe in his strictures upon vice, wrong and oppression, in his public discourses, as in private life, the same warm sensibilities often impelled the tones of the tenderest sympathy and the voice of touching eloquence.

“Firm and decided as an opponent, as a friend he was most congenial, combining often, in private life, conversation most cheerful, entertaining and instructive, and often a child-like simplicity, with a gentlemanly dignity that commanded the most affectionate respect.

“‘And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me write: Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.’”

It remains to be added that the widow and only child of brother E. survive him, and that to the kindness of Mr. Richard E. Ela, his son-in-law, of Rochester, Wis., we are indebted for many interesting facts and reminiscences. A faithful daguerreotype of the venerable man hangs in our East Room, adjoining the pulpit.

“Allow me,” says brother Eastman, in one of the last letters he ever wrote, describing the good feeling that existed in his day, “to hope and trust that this spirit of love has continued to exist among you to the present moment, and that you now realize how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.”

In the first three years of our history only three persons were received by baptism, and but two dismissed by letter; in the next three years, ninety-seven were baptized. It is somewhat remarkable that not a death occurred from the formation of the body, in 1823, until 1832.

The Rev. Octavius Winslow, having returned to this country, was chosen moderator of the various church-meetings held from the time of brother Eastman's resigning until his successor was chosen.

PERIOD II.

MINISTRY OF THE REV. GEORGE BENEDICT.

APRIL 20TH, 1831—FEBRUARY 1ST, 1841.

ON Monday, the 7th day of March, 1831, a meeting of the members of the church was held, the Rev. Octavius Winslow being chairman, and James Cowan secretary. At this meeting, the Rev. G. Benedict was invited, by a unanimous vote, to become the pastor of the church; and on the decision being communicated to him, he, in a short address, accepted the call. In April he removed to the city, in compliance with this cordial invitation, though the body, being small and weak (110 members), could offer a salary of only five hundred dollars; yet brother B. came in the spirit of his Master, and looked for the recompense of reward in another world. At a meeting of the church held April 20th, 1831, brother Benedict and his wife presented letters of dismissal from the Second

Baptist Church in Danbury, and on the same being received, it was voted that brother H. Phelps give the right hand of fellowship to the new pastor, which he did in a few appropriate remarks.

The Rev. George Benedict was born at South East, Dutchess County, New York, April 15th, 1795, during a temporary visit of his parents there. In a few weeks he was removed to the family residence in Danbury,* Conn., and in the common schools of that village he acquired the rudiments of a good education. His youth glided away in rural pursuits common to those of his age and station, and in 1817 he made a public profession of religion, being baptized into the fellowship of the Second Baptist Church in Danbury, on the 21st of September, by the Rev. Oliver Tuttle, pastor. In this, brother Benedict departed from the faith of his fathers, and it is evident that, though now in his twenty-third year, this step cost him a severe struggle, and

* Danbury (Pahquioque) was first settled by eight families, in 1685, two of them being Benedicts.—Lossing's Field Book of the Revolution, Vol. 1, p. 400.

was only taken in obedience to the dictates of an enlightened conscience. He had been convicted under a sermon preached in his father's house by the Rev. Abner Brundage, of Brookfield, Conn. It was not long after his conversion before he was deeply impressed to preach the Gospel; but in his own view being utterly unfit, he left the place and removed his family to New York. Here he remained some six months, and a like period at Rahway, N. J.; but while there he received the unanimous call of the Danbury Church to become their pastor. This presented the question of duty in an entirely new light, and the path was now so plain that he could no longer refuse to enter it. He had been licensed to preach on the 12th of May, 1822; he delivered his first sermon before the church at Danbury, August 6th, 1823, and was publicly recognized as its pastor on the following day. In great faithfulness, he preached unto them nearly eight years. His salary was but one hundred dollars per annum, and he labored through the week for the support of his family. Upon entering his more extended field of labor in the city, he gained the confidence of all, and early acquired that hold on the affections of the people which continued through life. Crowds filled the little wooden meeting-house at the corner of North (now Houston) and Forsyth streets, and after occupying it for two years, they accepted the invitation of the Bethel Baptist Church in Delancy street (corner of Chrystie), Rev. Wm. G. Miller, pastor, to meet with them until the erection of a house for themselves.

The initial steps to this enterprise were taken at the church meeting in December, 1832, upon a recommendation of the Board of Trustees. At this time only about $1,000 had been subscribed toward procuring the desired premises; but a venerable member of the Amity street Church, Deacon John Bowen, still living, added $500 more, and generously offered to lend money as it might be needed in the prosecution of the work. The offer was accepted, and Mr. Bowen's timely aid enabled the brethren to go forward. In June, 1833, the lots in Stanton street were secured, 58 by 100 feet, at a cost of $4,260, and on Monday morning, August 12th, the workmen commenced the new meeting-house. The corner-stone was laid on Tuesday, the 27th of August, with the following services: Reading part of 22d chapter of 1st Chronicles by brother Benedict; singing 132d Psalm; prayer by brother Middleton (pastor of the East Baptist Church); laying the corner-stone by the pastor; addresses by the Rev. Archibald Maclay and Rev. Charles W. Dennison; prayer by the Rev. Octavius Winslow; singing the Doxology, and benediction. A collection was also taken, amounting to $60. The very foundations of this edifice were laid in faith and prayer, and it was a greater undertaking for the brethren of that day, to erect a house of this size, than we who have entered into their labors can adequately appreciate. But they were whole-hearted and public spirited, and the good work went on. The subscriptions were paid in promptly, and no accident occurred to delay the work or endanger life. The edifice, 50 by 70 feet, was completed by spring, costing, with its furniture, about $10,000; and on Sunday, March 2d, 1834, it was solemnly dedicated to the worship of Almighty God. The Rev. A. Maclay preached in the morning, Rev. Wm. R. Williams in the afternoon, and Rev. Charles G. Somers in the evening. The collections during the day amounted to $156. The membership had largely increased during the ministry of brother Benedict, and on entering the new house they numbered 211; but this comprised the names of several who were virtually lost; the real, active strength of the church was considerably below that number. At the annual meeting of the society, held Tuesday evening, the 13th of May, 1834, for the election of Trustees, it was unanimously voted that the body "shall hereafter be called and known by the name of the Stanton street Baptist Church." And now the favored vine begins to flourish anew, the congregations increase in size and seriousness, and the letter to the association in June states that the Sunday-school had increased nearly three-fold since removing to Stanton street. Though resting under a large debt (nearly $10,000), they trusted in the Great Head of the Church, and were not confounded. The associational letter of June, 1836, from the pen of brother Benedict, was as follows:

“ BELOVED BRETHREN :

“ The return of another anniversary affords us the usual privilege of expressing our fellowship with you in one Lord, one faith, and one baptism. We feel confident that you will rejoice with us in the glorious success which everywhere attends the efforts of God’s people to gather in his children. He is crowning with tokens of his peculiar favor, the labors of our missionaries abroad, and his blessed spirit is stirring up our churches at home to a zeal and liberality hitherto unknown in our history as a denomination. The Church is arousing from her slumbers, and the glory of the Lord is inscribed upon her banners. The Macedonian cry, ‘ Come over and help us !’ is heard from those who for ages have sat ‘ in the region and shadow of death.’

“ ‘ They call us to deliver
Their land from error’s chain.’

As to our affairs as a church, we have abundant cause to sing aloud of the goodness and mercy of our faithful, covenant-keeping God ; and we desire to tell of that goodness, that others may praise him too. We not only enjoy peace and harmony, but during the past year some mercy drops have fallen on our Zion. During the past winter and spring, an unusual solemnity appeared to rest upon our congregation, so much so that the church felt called upon to set apart a few days for religious exercises, the results of which have been most happy. Soon after the commencement of our meeting, it was evident that the Lord was in the place. The Gospel seemed to come not in word only, but in power and in the Holy Ghost. Saints got near the throne, and sinners were made to tremble. Since that time thirty-three have been baptized, upon profession of their faith, and a number more are ready to put on Christ. Our congregation is full, attentive and solemn. Brethren, pray for us!"

The church pursued its blessed work of winning souls; and from time to time sent some of her members to Hamilton to prepare for the Gospel ministry. Bro. Wm. S. Mikels was sent in May, 1837, and he received a license to preach August 22d, 1838, by a unanimous vote. At a meeting of the Association in June of that year, the church reported the baptism of 84 persons, and the number of members as 460. In the spring of 1839, the salary of the pastor was increased to $1,200, in accordance with a recommendation from the Board of Trustees. The letter to the Association, June 18th, 1839, speaks of congregations "full to overflowing, so that many have been under the necessity of leaving for want of room." The number of baptisms reported was 159, fifty-five being baptized on the first Sabbath of two consecutive months. The total additions that year were only one less than 200, while the diminutions by death, removal, etc., were but 20—leaving the membership 644. Even this number was considerably increased by the additions of the succeeding winter, and at the close of the communion, April 5th, 1840, a meeting of the male members was called to assemble on Wednesday evening, to consider business of importance to the church. A large meeting convened at the time appointed. The pastor read a portion of the Scriptures, and prayer was offered by Deacon James Cowan. Brother Benedict was chosen moderator of the meeting, and C. S.

Vanderhoof clerk. The pastor stated the object of the meeting to be to take into consideration the propriety of sending out a colony, the communicants alone being now sufficient to fill the meeting-house. After a mutual interchange of sentiment, it was on motion—

“Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that it has become necessary for the church to colonize.”

A committee of seventeen was then appointed in reference to the object, to report the following Monday evening, and it was voted, “That this meeting recommend to the church that next Wednesday be observed as a day of thanksgiving and prayer for the blessings bestowed upon us as a church.” The recommendation was, of course, adopted.

At a meeting of the body, held April 15th, the following resolutions, submitted by the committee, were passed by a unanimous vote:

“Resolved, That the time has arrived when it has become necessary for this church to colonize.

“Resolved, That a committee be appointed to look out a proper location, and ascertain the price of such lots as may be necessary for the erection of a temple dedicated to the service of the living God ; the committee to report as soon as practicable.”

John N. Wyckoff, Richard C. Akerly, James Cowan, Abiel Miles and David Ludlam were chosen members of the committee. Soon after their appointment to obtain lots, they ascertained that the meeting-houses in Delancey street corner of Chrystie, and Norfolk street corner of Broome, were for sale ; but the majority favoring the location in Norfolk street, a sub-committee was appointed to ascertain whether Mr. Benedict would go with a portion of the brethren and sisters there, and become their pastor. He replied that he would be willing if the church thought best. A special church meeting was held September 9th, 1840, to hear the report of the committee on location, etc. They stated that the property on the corner of Norfolk and Broome streets could be obtained for $12,000, and the following resolution proposed by them was adopted, viz. :

“ Resolved, That measures be now taken by the church to raise $6,000 by subscriptions and donations, to enable the colony going out to purchase the property corner of Norfolk and Broome streets, one-fourth of what they raise to go toward liquidating the debt against the property in Stanton street,* be the amount raised more or less than $6,000." Brethren Wyckoff, Akerly, Peterson, Miles and Tiebout were appointed to carry this resolution into effect, and they were empowered to purchase the Norfolk street property for $12,000, provided $7,075 could remain on bond and mortgage. At the next meeting, September 16th, those in favor of Mr. Benedict's remaining as pastor in the Stanton street body, were requested to signify the same by rising, and the contrary by the same sign, but there was no dissent whatever. However, he presented his resignation at the regular church meeting, September 23d, though, owing to delays in securing the property, organizing the new interest, etc., it did not virtually take effect until the first of February, 1841. The resignation was as follows :

* This was subsequently rescinded, and all money raised was devoted to the purchase of the Norfolk street property. This left the debt upon Stanton street about $8,000.

“TO THE STANTON STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.

“BRETHREN AND SISTERS, BELOVED IN THE LORD. Of the kindness and generosity with which you have uniformly treated me I am deeply sensible. Nor have you, as a church, given me reason to suppose that your kindness is exhausted, or even diminished.

“When I yielded to your solicitations, more than nine years since, to take the oversight of that little flock, it was with feelings more readily felt than expressed. And when I came to you, ‘it was not with excellency of speech, or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God; for I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.’ I have been with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling; and although my speech and my preaching have not been with enticing words of man’s wisdom, yet I hope they have been in some measure in demonstration of the Spirit and of power; that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God. Since the existence of our relation as pastor and people, our heavenly Father has vouchsafed to bless us, and to increase us with men as a flock, insomuch that our place of worship has become too strait for us. The providence of God seems evidently to say, 'Enlarge the border of thy tent; lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes;' with a view, therefore, to extend the cause of truth in this city, I have thought it best, painful as it is, to tender my resignation as the pastor of this church, for the purpose of uniting in the organization of a regular Baptist Church, at the corner of Broome and Norfolk streets.

“In taking this important step I am comforted with the reflection that, within nine years, 608 have been added by baptism, and 167 by letter; and I feel greatly encouraged in the enterprise upon which I am about to enter, from the consideration, that it has been thus far conducted in the exercise of prayer, and a good degree of Christian affection; and that I expect to prosecute it not with strangers, but with brethren and sisters with whom I have for years walked in delightful fellowship. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace. Be careful for nothing; but in everything, by prayer and supplication, let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus, which is the earnest prayer of “Your affectionate pastor,

“GEO. BENEDICT.”

At the regular church meeting, January 27th, 1841, 238 letters of dismissal were granted to unite in the formation of the new church, and the next Wednesday evening, 83 letters more, making 321 at the two meetings. Of those who went to Norfolk street, 87 were males, 89 single females, and 145 married females. About 97 males remained, 112 single and 178 married females, of whom 100 or more were in the country, and several of those who remained, subsequently took letters to join the new interest. With the formation of the Norfolk street Baptist Church, of 364 members, of which brother

Benedict took the pastoral charge, his relation to Stanton street, which had existed nearly ten years, ceased. A large congregation was soon gathered in his new field of labor, and as before, much people were added unto the Lord. In the summer of 1844 he was chosen moderator of the Hudson River Association.

But in the full tide of success, and the high meridian of his useful life, sickness seized upon him, and for the space of two years he was laid aside from active labor. In the intervals of pain he gladly embraced every opportunity of meeting with this church, and on fast-days and other special occasions he was always present when not prevented by infirmity. The Fourth Annual Meeting of the Young Men's Mission Society was held here on Monday evening, December 21st, 1846. The exercises were opened with prayer by father Peck, and closed with the benediction by brother Benedict. He had entered the house during the services, and being unable to take any other part, he dismissed the meeting as above stated.

His disease becoming more painful and complicated, he deemed it his duty to resign, and his connection as pastor of the Norfolk street church ceased July 1st, 1848. This resignation was read and accepted at a meeting of the Norfolk street Church held in our lecture room, and here his successor was chosen. Their meeting-house at the corner of Norfolk and Broome streets having been destroyed by fire, the church had accepted an invitation to hold their evening meetings in our basement.

Mr. Benedict's ministry extended over a period of twenty-five years, more than seventeen being spent in this city. Here he baptized nearly twelve hundred persons, and he attended the funerals of almost as many more. It was always his custom to call on a bereaved family soon after officiating at a funeral, and his kindly ministrations on these occasions was the means of leading many to the house of God, and ultimately to the Saviour.

But his day had reached its evening hour, and on the 28th of October, 1848, he departed this life in sure and certain hope of entering into the rest prepared for the people of God. Three days afterward the First Baptist Church was crowded on the occasion of his funeral. The sermon was preached by the Rev. S. H. Cone, D.D., from Acts, xi., 24. 'For he was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, and much people was added unto the Lord.' A long procession followed the remains to Greenwood, where a monument has been erected to his memory. It bears the following inscription :

REV. GEORGE BENEDICT,

WHO FELL ASLEEP IN JESUS OCT. 28TH, 1848,

In the 54th year of his age, and in the full hope of that Gospel he had so long recommended to others. He was for 26 years a faithful Minister of Christ, over 17 of which he was Pastor of the Stanton and Norfolk street Baptist Churches.

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."—2 Cor. v. i.

A mural tablet was also placed in the new meeting-house of the Norfolk street Church. It is inscribed as follows :

IN

REV. GEORGE BENEDICT,

For seven years

PASTOR OF THIS CHURCH,

And for twenty-six years a faithful and successful

AMBASSADOR OF CHRIST.

He was born

APRIL 15TH, 1795,

And died in triumph

OCTOBER 28TH, 1848.

Soli Deo Gloria.

His widow and two children yet remain to cherish his memory while they lament his loss.

At the time of his decease, Mr. Benedict was in his 54th year, but his personal appearance was that of a man many years younger. His life had been one of unceasing labor, but happily free from controversy and those consuming cares which embitter one's being, and bring age on prematurely. The general expression of his countenance was extremely pleasing, and his manner was of that easy and attractive character calculated alike to win the young and conciliate those of maturer years. No man had a happier faculty of introducing the subject of religion; in season or out of season, it was never repulsive when presented by him. He probed the secret soul, but his words were soft and kind. "My son—my daughter—come now and let us reason together," he would say; and the next hour would find the young friend in tears, earnestly seeking that good part which the personal preacher had so earnestly recommended. In his sermons, as in his conversation, religion was divested of anything like gloom; he always seemed to see the sun of righteousness himself, and hence his success in pointing others to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world. He was a man mighty in prayer. There his great strength lay. Others might surpass him in felicity of illustration, the refinements of rhetoric, and the graces of the schools; but no man of his day had plainer proof that his prayers were heard and answered—that his labor was not in vain in the Lord. Little children loved him; and in the hearts of all who knew him he was enshrined as a father and a friend.

It may be thought by some that as we recede from the period of his actual life there is a tendency to praise the creature more than the Creator—to applaud the past at the expense of the present. This is a mistaken view. This sketch is not prepared in the vain spirit of hero worship, but as a humble tribute to the memory of one who had grace to be faithful in his day and generation. And while we depict this life and character, we see reason for devout thanksgiving to the Shepherd and Bishop of souls, that he counted this man faithful, putting him into the ministry. With talents and ability that otherwise employed might have won him riches and honors among the successful ones of earth, he turned aside and became a man of one idea—that idea being to glorify God and serve him with single-eyed devotion. He had no side interests to promote. The “one idea” was all-absorbing; and here is another secret of his extensive usefulness. With one object before him, and one only, he concentrated upon it the energies of an active nature, the judgment of a clear intellect, and infused through all, the best affections of a warm and constant heart.

In our earthly courts we shall see his face no more. On no coming Sabbath will the touching tones of that well-remembered voice fall tenderly on the ear. He worships now in higher courts, and with a ransomed church. No death-day darkens in the distance now, no fading sunset hues announce the coming night, for their sun shall no more go down, the days of their mourning are ended. We may feel a shadow of regret that a life so useful should have been so brief; that a nature so kind and affectionate was thus early withdrawn from the church below; but let us not forget that the being of our brother is neither suspended nor extinguished. Though lost to mortal sight, he has attained a place among those who have turned many to righteousness, and who shall shine as the stars forever and ever.

PERIOD III.

MINISTRY OF THE REV. DAVID BELLAMY.

SEPT. 1ST, 1841—NOV. 15TH, 1846.

DURING the greater part of the year 1841 the church was without a pastor. Rev. Lewis Raymond, Rev. George J. Carleton, Rev. Thomas O. Lincoln, Rev. Lemuel Porter, Rev. B. M. Hill, Rev. Lemuel Covell, and Rev. David Bellamy, of Ithaca, N. Y., severally preached during a portion of the time from February to September; but the congregations were generally small, and the prospect decidedly discouraging. Some interest existed during Mr. Raymond's stay with the church, and nineteen persons were baptized before brother Benedict's successor began his ministry among us. Unanimous calls were extended to brethren Lincoln and Porter, but both declining, it was, on the 29th of June, voted unanimously to invite brother Bellamy to assume the pastoral charge. This call he accepted, and entered upon the discharge of his duties September 1st, 1841.

Rev. David Bellamy was born at Kingsbury, Washington County, N. Y., on the 19th of May, 1806. His childhood and youth were passed in that healthy and romantic region, surrounded by noble and beautiful scenery, and in the enjoyment of more than ordinary advantages for obtaining an education. Being of a studious habit, his improvement was marked and rapid. The boy received his first abiding religious impressions at the age of ten years, during the great revival of 1816, in which both his parents were converted. Upon leaving school, he devoted himself to business with characteristic assiduity, but he made no profession of religion until twenty-four years of age. Meantime he had married and removed to Chatauqua County, and there his attention was recalled to the long-neglected subject of religion. Aroused from his backslidden state, he gave up his business, and repaired, with his wife, who had been converted also, to his native place, and there made a public profession of faith in presence of the companions and acquaintances of his youth. He was baptized by the Rev. Amos Stearns, who is still living, in 1859. This proved the beginning of a glorious revival, in the progress of which nearly one hundred souls were brought to Christ in that vicinity. Six months sufficed to convince his pastor and brethren, and ultimately himself, that his destination was the pulpit. Accordingly he was soon licensed, and began to preach. Being married, he found a full college course impracticable; but the young man resolved that if hard study and untiring industry would yield him an equivalent for such a course, he would obtain it. Vigorous health enabled him to accomplish this, as well as to pursue in private the course of reading and study required of theological students in that day. But this was carried on in connection with stated and constant pulpit and pastoral labors, necessarily occupying a considerable portion of his time. Brother Bellamy's first pastoral engagement was at Skeneateles, Onondaga County, N.Y., with a branch of the Elbridge Baptist Church, of which the Rev. C. M. Fuller was pastor. He was ordained to the work of the Gospel ministry at Skeneateles, January 11, 1833, remained there about two years, and labored with considerable success; but it was pioneer work. Thence he was called to Manlius, in the same county, where he toiled for six years, and until shattered health required a resignation. Several precious revivals were enjoyed during the period of his ministry at Manlius, and it was his practice in those years to go abroad and labor in other churches during seasons of refreshing. This preaching was blessed of God in a wonderful manner to the conversion of souls. Constant labor in meetings, for months in succession, at last impaired his health, especially the vocal organs, and finally compelled him to resign in May, 1839. Previous to this time he had been called to prominent positions, such as Syracuse, Oswego, Utica and Albany; but all these invitations were declined in favor of the people of his choice, the little flock at Manlius. After his resignation took place, some months were spent in rest, and medical experiments, but without producing any visible beneficial results. At last, however, being in the city of New York, he was urged by the late Rev. S. H. Cone, D.D., to engage in the service of the American and Foreign Bible Society in the western part of the State. This agency brother Bellamy accepted, and with gratifying results. The travel invigorated his weakened body as medicine had failed to do, and he was soon strong enough to enter the pastoral office again. Accepting the cordial invitation of the Baptist Church at Ithaca, in Tompkins County, his labors were blessed as before, and a glorious revival followed. His stay there, however, was brief—scarcely fifteen months—during the latter part of which time he was in correspondence with this church.

The aspect of things here, as before indicated, was quite forbidding at the time Mr. Bellamy took charge. His predecessor, widely known for his piety, generally beloved for his warm heart and winning address, was located in the same part of the city, with all the advantages of ten years' experience and acquaintance with the ground. Nearly all the congregation, as distinct from the church, had followed brother Benedict or become scattered, and though a nominal membership of between three and four hundred remained, this included those absent in the country, the useless and the lost of the whole period of the church's history. It may well be doubted whether the real active members numbered more than two hundred at this time. "But (writes brother Bellamy), they were led by some of the best, most faithful, efficient, and trustworthy brethren I ever knew."

The services of publicly recognizing the new pastor were held in our meeting-house, on Wednesday evening, September 22d, 1841, as follows: Prayer by Rev. A. Wheelock; sermon by Rev. S. H. Cone, D.D., from Matt. xvi. 26: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

The hand of fellowship was given by the Rev. George Benedict; address to the church by the Rev. C. G. Somers; prayer by the Rev. Z. Grenell, and benediction by brother Bellamy. The evening was fine, the meeting-house crowded on this interesting occasion, and the hearts of all inspired with fresh courage. Toward the close of the year an organ was placed in the gallery—a variety of musical instruments having been used previously—and the church, with their new pastor, went to work in earnest. Rev. Philetus B. Peck, of Owego, whose blameless life and early death will be long remembered, was invited to assist in a protracted meeting, and the brethren and sisters met every night during an entire week to supplicate the divine blessing upon their efforts. Nor did they pray in vain. Brother Peck preached his first sermon on Sunday, December 12th, 1841, and it was soon evident that the Holy Spirit was moving on the hearts of men. Conversions were frequent in the congregation, and a large number joined themselves to the company of the disciples. The meetings were continued until the close of winter, the Rev. Joseph H. Chamberlain assisting part of the time. The letter to the Association in the summer of 1842, thus mentions this blessed revival: “A deep and general interest was manifested in the great subject of religion; night after night many presented themselves for the prayers of God’s people, and day after day we were permitted to hear that souls had emerged into the liberty of the Gospel and were rejoicing with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Month after month it has been our privilege to repair to the baptismal waters, and as the fruit thus far of this glorious revival, ninety-three willing converts have been buried in the likeness of the Saviour's death, and we are happy to receive the evidence from time to time that the seed so faithfully sown, and watered with tears and prayers, is still bringing forth fruit to the glory of his name who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light."

As the year 1842 waned away, and the evenings lengthened, the brethren began to inquire whether the number of meetings might not be advantageously increased. This was decided on, and the Rev. Jay S. Backus was invited to come and assist the pastor in preaching the word and laboring to win souls. He came in January, 1843, and Tuesday, the 24th, was observed as a day of fasting and prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Prayer-meetings were held at 6.30 and 10 o'clock, A.M., and at 6 P.M. Brother Backus preached at 10.30 o'clock, A.M., from

James, iv. 3: "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss," and the pastor preached in the evening from Rom., vi. 23: "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Morning prayer meetings were held at 6 o'clock for a fortnight, and preaching at 2 P.M., as well as in the evenings. The meetings for the reception of members and the transaction of other business, were held in the daytime, so as not to interfere with the devotional services. This revival continued almost four months. The next letter to the Association speaks of the baptism of one hundred and thirteen persons, making over two hundred in eighteen months; and the number of church members had increased to five hundred and forty-three.

There being now a considerable number of young men in the body, it was early in the year (1843) proposed by the pastor, to form a Missionary Society, the management of which should be committed to them; and on Wednesday evening, March 29th, the following persons were appointed to draft a Constitution for the proposed society, and report as soon as practicable:

—Rev. D. Bellamy, deacons H. Phelps, and B. M. Thompson, with brethren C. B. Stout, John H. Ludlam, Joseph Della Torre, and Abram M. Fanning. This committee had several sessions at the house of the pastor, and on the 20th of April, they presented to the church a copy of the Constitution, drawn up by brother Bellamy, very nearly as it now stands, it having only been slightly amended from that day to the present. In consequence of a pressure of other business, the Constitution was not finally acted on until August 28th, a special church meeting being held for the purpose, when it was cordially adopted, and the officers and managers chosen. John H. Ludlam was the first president, C. B. Stout, secretary, and George W. Ewing, treasurer. The young men immediately set about their appointed work, and before the close of the year their receipts amounted to forty dollars per month. The society then inaugurated continues its efforts with unabated efficiency, has led to the formation of many similar organizations, and has disbursed many thousands of dollars for missionary purposes, both at home and abroad. It has held correspondence with most of the foreign missionaries, from the Judsons until now, and many precious interviews have been enjoyed with returned missionaries temporarily in this country. It was during this pastorate that the late lamented Rev. E. L. Abbott revisited his native land, and his first public meeting in America was held here on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 16th, 1845. He was formally and affectionately welcomed by the pastor; the house was crowded, and the audience deeply affected. At the close of the services Mr. Abbott repeated the Lord's Prayer in Karen. Kincaid, Dawson, Dean, Ingalls, Howard, Haswell, Brown, and many others who have spoken words of cheer in our hearing, are still cherished in our hearts. A cabinet of curiosities has been gradually forming, until the West Room now displays a number of objects deeply interesting to all who love the cause of missions, or are interested in the welfare of the world.

In the year 1843 the old wooden stoops and fence in front of the meeting-house were removed, and the present substantial stone steps and iron railings erected. At the same time the decayed brick pavement was exchanged for solid flagging. During Mr. Bellamy's ministry, gas was introduced for lighting, in place of oil, which had been used exclusively hitherto.

The meeting-house was greatly crowded in the early part of this year, to hear a course of able lectures on the prophecies, particularly with reference to the second coming of Christ. As this subject was prominently before the public mind at the time, it is believed that this series of sermons, listened to by so many persons, was productive of incalculable good. The pastor's expository lectures should also be mentioned. It was his custom, on Sabbath mornings, to speak from the gospels in order. In this way the whole of St. Matthew was gone through with, chapter by chapter, and verse by verse—lingering where obscure, and explaining to the satisfaction of all. These discourses are still spoken of as highly edifying, and far more instructive and satisfactory than the usual preaching from isolated texts.

In the winter of 1843-44, Rev. Isaac Wescott

aided the pastor in a season of extra meetings, and in June following, the church reported five hundred and seventy-nine members to the association. About the same number was reported in June 1845,* and in December of that year it was resolved to hold a protracted meeting. Rev. John Blain was written to, but as his services could not be secured, Rev. Ira R. Steward assisted the pastor from time to time as his other duties would permit. During this and the following year efforts were made to reduce the debt upon our property, and about two thousand dollars were realized for this purpose. Including this amount, about twenty thousand dollars were raised for benevolent objects, while brother Bellamy was with us. On the 18th of August, 1846, the pastor presented his resignation, to take effect on the 15th of November. This resignation was in due time accepted, and the following preamble and resolutions adopted by a unanimous vote, October 21st:

“Whereas, our pastor, the Rev. David Bellamy, is about leaving us, having announced his intention to relinquish his charge on the 15th of November next, it seems to us that the dissolution of so tender a relation (and which has existed between us for the past five years with such evident tokens of the divine blessing), should not be permitted to occur without an expression of the kindly feeling and high respect which his pulpit labors, unstained and Christian deportment have not failed to produce: therefore,

“Resolved, That the period of brother Belamy’s ministry, during which so many of us have been hopefully converted to God, in which our numbers and resources have been largely increased, and in which we have been so much edified and instructed by the Gospel proclaimed from his lips—will not cease to be remembered with interest and gratitude.

“Resolved, That whatever may be the field in which his talents may be employed to promote the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ, we offer him the assurance that he will be followed by our sympathies, best wishes and prayers.”

Brother Bellamy's farewell sermon was delivered on Sunday, November 15, 1846, and his connection with this body then terminated. Like his predecessor, he spent the meridian of his life with this church, and the tabular statement appended hereto, will show some of the results of his toil. The duties of such a pastoral charge are realized by but few persons. Studying, preaching, visiting the membership and among the congregation, calls to funerals and visits to the chambers of sickness, labor in the Boards of benevolent societies, to say nothing of marriages, councils, ordinations, associations, etc., leave no hours of leisure. Labor, care and anxiety, varied only by more anxiety, care and labor, make up the history of a city pastor's life.

It was while in Stanton street that the honorary degree of A.M. was conferred upon brother B. by Madison University. With him a large number of members took their letters to unite in forming Hope Chapel (now Calvary) Baptist Church, and with that body he labored for three years, when impaired health led to a resignation of the charge. Two years of illness followed; and then he accepted the call of the Baptist Church in Arcadia, Wayne County, N. Y. While laboring there, Mrs. Eliza A. Bellamy, his wife, well known to many in this city, was summoned to the spirit-land. But the angel of death found her prepared to depart. Though her physical suffering was great (her disease being congestion of the lungs), she exclaimed, "I am happy ! all is well ! all is well !" Having thus borne her last testimony to the faithfulness of the Redeemer, she turned her face to the wall and sweetly fell asleep.

From Arcadia Brother Bellamy removed to Mount Morris, Livingston County, N. Y., where he is still successfully engaged in the ministry.* The field is somewhat limited in extent, but is therefore all the better adapted to his somewhat diminished bodily vigor. The quiet of an intelligent country village affords more time for patient study and research, and is thus conducive to the profit of both pulpit and pew. His friends will be glad to know that he regards his present position as extremely pleasant, and that peace, plenty and kindness attend him. Both of his predecessors in the ministry among us have gone home. The following sketch from his pen affords a fitting close to this portion of the work :

THE JOYFUL DEATH-BED.

Perhaps there is no conviction that becomes more strongly fixed in the mind of a Christian minister of long experience and observation, than that the dying saint has often, if not always, wondrous and preternatural discoveries of heavenly things while yet this side the spirit-world. Of many interesting facts and memories of this kind, few have made deeper impressions than the following :

The members of the Stanton street Baptist Church who participated in the Revivals of 1842-4, cannot fail to recollect the name and countenance of Mrs. Mary Lyon. In one of those seasons of refreshing—I think that in which we were aided for a season by Rev. Mr.

Wescott—she was converted, and gave sound and thorough evidence of renewal of heart. The milder graces of the Gospel, joined with great conscientiousness and fidelity in discharge of duty, seemed especially prominent. She felt from the first that religion was the great business of life; that her time was brief, and that she had not a moment to spare, in view of the much she had to do. The privileges of the House of God were exceedingly precious to her, and none were neglected. All this soon came to an end. She met her brethren but a few times in Christian worship before a severe cold, contracted by exposure, led to a fatal pulmonary disease. She lingered a few months, an example of patient suffering, sustained by the promises of Christ, mourning, most of all, that she could no longer join in the devotions of the sanctuary and the public song of praise. When looking forward to a dying hour, to keener distress of body, and a separation from her little family, she often supported her own faith by repeating audibly the promise, "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." During her whole illness this as-urance was her staff and help, her hope in gloom. His "grace would be sufficient" for her.

She delighted in receiving the visits of her pastor, who never left her bedside without feeling that he had been the party most benefited by the interview. Fully conscious that her days were numbered and the end very near, her affections seemed fixed on things above and her mind absorbed in expectation of "good things to come." The allotted weeks of her life flew rapidly away, and one morning, at about two o'clock, her pastor was summoned at her request to come and witness the closing scene. On entering the room, it seemed no place of sadness, none of mourning. I was filled with amazement. Although emaciated to the last degree, her eye had lost none of its brightness; on the contrary, it blazed with unwonted brilliancy, as though the glory within shot out its rays through those windows of the soul. Her whole countenance was lighted up with joy. She bade me a most cordial welcome, and began speaking on her favorite topic—the Saviour's love and his fidelity to his people and his promises. She said she had expected his grace would be sufficient for a dying hour, and she found it so. Death had no power, he could not even alarm her. "This," said she, "is the happiest hour of my life. Never was Christ so nigh, so precious—never were my hopes so bright, my way so clear." She seemed to be in full possession of all her rational faculties to the last—calm and happy.

Some time was spent in prayer, in repeating promises and texts suitable to her state, and in listening to her rapturous expressions of joy, hope, confidence and love. When an hour, perhaps, had been spent thus, she advised her pastor to go home and retire to rest. He expressed unwillingness to leave her till all was over, but she urged her request, stating that to-morrow would be time enough, and that she would see me again. Said she, "I shall not go to-night; my Saviour came for me at 12 o'clock to-night, and will take me at 12 o'clock at noon; he is here—he stands by your side—I see him as plainly as I see any of you—he will never leave me again—never, no never, no never!" He said, 'If I go away, I will come again and receive you,' and he has come, blessed be his name!"

She then, recollecting that she would be weaker, and perhaps speechless, when I came again, began to give directions in regard to the funeral services. She selected a text, her favorite one, "As thy days, so shall thy strength be," and wished me to tell the people how fully it had been performed in her case. She asked for her hymn-book and a lamp, and found the hymn she had selected to be sung on that occasion; and with eyes half palsied in death, though still brilliant, read with difficulty several stanzas, and among them—

" Jesus can make a dying bed Feel soft as downy pillows are—
Upon his breast I'll lean my head,
 And breathe my life out sweetly there!"

Having arranged all this to her mind, she gave me several messages to be delivered to the church—to the young converts, and to her unconverted friends—sent, as she said, from the borders of eternity.

I left her soon after, but saw her the next day. She lingered, as she said she should, until 12 at noon, when she fell asleep, as though in a Saviour's arms, peacefully, quietly, as a child on its mother's bosom.

Her earthly privileges in the church were few and transient, for she scarcely knew what health was from the day of her conversion. These deficiencies, however, her Lord knew how to make up to her, by richer and more familiar displays of himself; so that the period of earthly trial and probation was full of knowledge, experience and joy.

PERIOD IV.

MINISTRY OF REV. S. REMINGTON.

NOV. 15TH, 1846—FEB. 1ST, 1852.

TAKING warning from the months of anxiety and trial to the church which succeeded the pastorate of brother Benedict, it was thought prudent to secure a pastor to succeed brother Belamy as soon as possible. The church, meanwhile, prayed without ceasing that the Lord would send them an under shepherd, and their minds were directed to Rev. Stephen Remington, then of Fitchburg, Mass., whom they invited to preach for them; and the church, on Tuesday evening, September 29th, 1846, extended a call to him to become their pastor. In answer to this invitation, a letter from brother Remington was read to the church, Sabbath afternoon, October 11th, 1846, from which the following is an extract:

“My earnest prayer is that the church may grow in grace, that it may become a holy church, each member walking worthy of his high and holy calling; and that the beloved congregation may all of them be converted to God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

“For these noble objects, beloved brethren and sisters, I am willing to labor and suffer among you. United to each other and to Christ, we stand—divided we fall. Remember your future pastor in the prayer-room, at the family altar, and in secret. And pray earnestly that he may come to you in the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ, and that his stay among you may be sanctioned with the visible tokens of the divine favor.

“With sincere affection, in the bonds of Gospel fellowship, I am, dear brethren and sisters, your friend and brother, and by this acceptance,

“Your future pastor,

“STEPHEN REMINGTON.”

REV. STEPHEN REMINGTON was born in Bedford, Westchester County, New York, on the 16th of

May, in the year 1803, of pious parents, who had been for many years connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church. While still a boy, they departed this life, leaving clear and satisfactory evidence of their adoption into the family of Christ, and earnestly beseeching divine mercy upon their children. Stephen was greatly moved at their loss, and, speaking of his mother, he says: "I felt the influence of her prayers checking me in my sinful career, awakening in my mind the lessons of admonition which I had often received from her lips, and producing the keenest convictions of conscience. I have always believed that my early conversion to God was in answer to her prayers."

He was very soon the subject of deep conviction. Such was his sense of guilt, that he was in the severest bondage through fear of death and hell. He then knew not how God could be just and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus; he did not apprehend the nature of salvation through Christ. "Oh, could the cross of Jesus," he said afterward, "just then have been elevated to my view, methinks I would have sought refuge beneath its shadow, and felt the healing streams of his precious blood.”

About this time he left his parents' roof, and came to reside in the city of New York. Here he fell into bad company—into the society of wild, godless young men. He became a profane swearer and a Sabbath-breaker. Still his convictions had never fully forsaken him, and at times thoughts of eternity would obtrude, and the terrors of death would check his course. He dared not attempt to pray, but thoughts of death and of a terrible retribution were forced upon him by his own escape from a watery grave on the occasion of the drowning of three brothers among his acquaintances, who, together with himself and others, were violating the Sabbath by sailing and fishing. This event made so deep an impression upon his mind, that he resolved never again to desecrate the Sabbath in that way. This resolution he maintained. He now attended church, read his Bible, prayed in secret, and watched over his besetting sins ; and so much had his conduct improved that it became a subject of remark among his friends.

At this time, being between the ages of fifteen and sixteen, he went to reside in Ridgefield, Conn. Here he resolved that he would continue to lead a new life, and that all his associates should be those who feared God. He was rejoiced to learn that the family in which he was to reside, was a religious one, and that his room-mate was a consistent young Christian. He found the example and influence of this friend most salutary; they expressed their feelings freely to each other, conversed much upon the subject of religion, and prayed one for the other. His convictions now assumed a different phase, marked by the almost total disappearance of that dread of death, that fearful looking for judgment which characterized his early exercises. He began to fear, indeed, that God had given him over to hardness of heart, being even yet ignorant of the theory of salvation. He still felt in his own mind that he must do something more to obtain salvation than he had ever done, and yet it seemed that he never could of himself merit eternal life. After continuing in this state five months, and during this period seeking God day and night, he was brought to see, as he himself expresses it, "just what I needed; that is, to be saved from my sins, from their guilt by pardon, and from their dominion by a regenerated heart." It was on a Sabbath morning, when just past his sixteenth year, that he found peace, while praying with his pious room-mate. He writes: "One thing I know, I loved God, and Jesus Christ whom he hath sent, and this filled my heart with an undying love to a perishing world. The mainspring of my zeal was to win souls to Christ. Imperfect and feeble as my labors were, they were not in vain in the Lord. It was not long before I had the happiness of seeing many of my young companions, and even those far my seniors, made the subjects of saving grace.

"I was led to unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, because there seemed to be more of the life and power of religion among them than any other people with whom I was acquainted. Mr. Wesley used to say, 'Methodism is a continued revival of religion!' May God fill the world full of such Methodism!"

For a while he taught school, and then was received into the conference as a traveling preacher. After a four years' course of study, he was ordained; but during all the interval from the time of his conversion, he had sought to lead sinners to the Saviour. Several considerations led him to seek a medical education, and he accordingly graduated at Harvard University, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Still he preached every Sabbath day, and sought at once to benefit the bodies as well as the souls of men. In less than a year, however, the interests of the church required his entire time, and the medical profession was abandoned. While in the Methodist connection, brother Remington was a member of the New York, Troy and New England Conferences, and was stationed at Hartford, Conn., Brooklyn, N. Y., New York city, Troy, Schenectady, and Boston and Lowell, in Mass. It was while pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, in Lowell, that he changed his views of Gospel truth, and left that denomination. In February, 1846, himself and wife were baptized into the fellowship of the Worthen street Baptist Church, Lowell, by the Rev. Lemuel Porter, pastor. His "Reasons for Becoming a Baptist," published soon afterward, has obtained an immense circulation, and no doubt has been productive of great good. On the 19th of March, 1846, brother R. was publicly recognized as pastor of the Baptist Church at Fitchburg, Mass. The sermon was delivered by Rev. L. Porter, right hand of fellowship extended by Rev. Orrin Tracy, charge by the Rev. Daniel Sharp, D.D., of Boston, and charge to the church by Rev. D. D. Pratt, of Nashua, N. H. Though pleasantly situated in Fitchburg, brother R. deemed it his duty to accept the invitation so cordially extended by this church, and he entered upon the duties of this pastorate, November 15, 1846, having, with great acceptance, served the church at Fitchburg about eight months.

On Friday evening, November 27th, the letters of dismission of brother Remington, and Mrs. Eliza Ann, his wife, were received, and on the first Sabbath in December the right hand of fellowship was extended to them on behalf of the church, by Dr. John R. Bigelow. The public recognition took place in the meeting-house, on the 24th, as follows: Singing the eighty-fourth hymn of Winchel's Collection; reading first Corinthians, first chapter, from 18th verse, by Rev. J. T. Seeley; opening prayer, by Rev. David Bellamy; singing; sermon by Rev. John Dowling, D.D., on first Corinthians, i. 23: "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness;" prayer by Rev. C. G. Somers, D.D.; right hand of fellowship by Rev. George Benedict; charge to the pastor by Rev. S. H. Cone, D.D.; charge to the church and congregation by Rev. J. L. Hodge, D.D.; singing by the choir; closing prayer by father Peck; and benediction by the pastor.

From this time to the beginning of February the number of letters of dismissal granted, together with the exclusions and deaths, amounted to forty-nine; but at that time eleven persons came before the church and related what they believed God had done for their souls. These primitiæ, or "first fruits," were baptized in the East River, at the head of Water street, on the first Sabbath in the month.

In April, a communication was received from the Hope Chapel Baptist Church, requesting the appointment of delegates to sit in council, with those from other churches, to consider the propriety of recognizing them as a regular Baptist Church. In compliance with this request the pastor and three brethren were appointed, and, after a careful consideration of the subject, the Hope Chapel Church was formally recognized. Over one hundred of its members had taken letters from Stanton street. This reduction of our number was felt for a considerable period, and the best efforts of all were required to sustain the various interests and departments of the church. The pastor speaks particularly of the efficiency of the Board of Deacons, whose sympathy and cheerful coöperation never failed. Deacon Phelps he describes as kind, courteous, but cautious; he was a balance-wheel and a peacemaker. Deacon Cowan was familiar with the entire history of the body, and was a directory for each family and member. Deacon Thompson seemed to be all heart, and that heart full of love. In the chamber of sickness and death he was at home. The widow and the fatherless found in him an unfailing friend. Deacon Bailie was a Sunday-school man, and devoted himself to the interests of that department with unflagging zeal. Deacon Akerly was distinguished for his whole-souled liberality, and Deacon Watson for a strong adherence to orthodox views and the old paths. Deacons Phelps and Bailie are still office-bearers among us.

We feel that we should neglect a duty which we owe to the church and the cause of Christ, did we pass over in silence the interesting death of one of the young brethren, which occurred at this time. William L. Mangam, on the 27th day of August, 1847, in the twenty-second year of his age, departed to be with Christ, which is far better. At the age of seventeen, while attending a series of meetings held in the Norfolk street Baptist Church, under the pastoral care of the beloved Benedict, the Holy Spirit fastened the arrow of conviction upon his heart, and brought up before his mind the sins of the past in their most vivid form, so that he found no rest. But unwilling to yield his heart to God, he strove to drown the voice of conscience by plunging into sin. Thus he partially succeeded in alleviating the poignancy of conviction, until the following winter, 1844, when meetings of a similar kind being held in Stanton street, he was earnestly persuaded by Christian friends to attend. Being invited to the theater on one of the evenings on which a prayer-meeting was to be held, he was urged to be present at the latter, and, after a severe struggle, concluded to do so. Here the Holy Spirit revived his former convictions. He now saw that he had reached the crisis of his immortal soul, and that a prompt decision, followed by immediate action, was the only door of escape from the wrath to come. Therefore, on the "4th of February, 1844, he resolved to surrender himself to Christ, and went forward to the anxious-seat for the prayers of the people of God. But though his distress was great, and his humility unfeigned, yet he found no relief that evening. The load of guilt still pressed upon his conscience, and with a broken heart and contrite spirit, he left the house of prayer. On the following evening he was again found in the lecture-room, at the feet of Jesus, as a suppliant for mercy, when deliverance came to his poor sin-stricken heart. He was baptized into the fellowship of the church, on Lord's Day morning, February 18th; and from that time until the day of his death he remained steadfast, growing in grace. In less than four years he finished his course; but short as was his Christian career, he was ripe for heaven. He was emphatically gathered from God's Spiritual harvest-field." *

Passing over the incidents of his Christian experience, related by brother Remington, an extract from the same article with reference to his triumphant death, will close this sketch.

"During the night on which he died, his distress was great, from shortness of breath. He desired to see the doctor, but his father, who was aware that it was death, directed him to look to the Physician of souls. He was silent a short time, as if in prayer, and then almost in an unearthly voice, the word 'Glory' was uttered by our dying friend, then 'Hallelujah'—'Good bye.' His mother said: 'My son, you are dying.' 'Yes, mother,' he replied, with a heavenly smile. 'Father, dear father, I am glad that you did not send for the doctor. It is death!' Raising his voice—'open the doors and tell them to come in and see how a Christian can die.' The room was soon filled with the family and friends. An impenitent young man was absent whom he requested to see. While some one went for him, William addressed himself to an unconverted brother-in-law: 'Oh, what will you do without a Saviour, when death stares you in the face as it does me?' He continued talking with great earnestness to this individual for some time. 'Your wife,' said he, 'is one of my unconverted sisters.' And then, turning to her, in the most touching appeals warned her to prepare to meet her God. In the mean time, the young man sent for had arrived, to whom he said: 'Oh what will you do without the presence of Jesus, when the King of terrors comes? I have wanted, as oftentimes I have done, to warn you; and now is the time, for this is death.

I am dying! Will you promise me that you will seek the Lord?' He answered that he would try. Our young brother then spoke to an aunt present, who was far advanced in life, and exhorted her to prepare for death. Then he attempted to sing, repeating—'Hal-le-lu-jah—glory—O that eternal weight of glory—hal-le-lu-jah—I would not live alway, I ask not to stay,' etc. Then, turning to his only brother, he said, in sweetest accents: 'Live for God. Be thou faithful unto death, and meet your brother in heaven.' After this, reverently turning to his father, he said: 'My dear father, did you ever contemplate the glorious plan of salvation?' 'Yes, my son,' replied his father. 'Is it not majestic?' responded William. 'It is, my son,' answered the father, adding, 'and you will soon behold it with immortal sight.' 'Oh, my father,' said the dying son, 'I see it now five times as bright as you do. Oh glory!' 'Oh 'tis not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy that he saves us—hallelujah—glory!'

“O sing to me of heaven,
 When I am called to die—
 Sing songs of holy ecstasy,
 To waft my soul on high.’

“Then to his mother he said: ‘This is death! I am dying! I’ve got my senses—I can see—I can hear—but my breath’—(gasping for breath as he was speaking). ‘Oh this machinery. Je—Jesus is precious. Downy pillows were never so soft as a dying bed with the presence of Jesus. Hallelujah!’ After remaining quite silent and motionless for a few moments, he suddenly became animated, and cried out: ‘The chariot of the Lord and the horsemen thereof.’ One word more—‘hallelujah!’—fell from his faltering tongue, when he ceased to breathe, and his sanctified spirit was unclothed of its earthly house, and soared aloft to glory and to God, to be clothed upon with that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. He requested to have inscribed on his tomb—‘LIVE FOR GOD.’”

The funeral sermon was delivered in the Stanton street Church by the pastor, from these words, selected by himself during his last illness—“I have found a ransom.”—JOB, xxxiii. 24.

For some months, an inquiry had been going on relative to the propriety of administering the ordinance of baptism in the meeting-house instead of in the river, as hitherto. It was thought that the expense of engaging conveyances to the water, the noise caused by them in passing through the streets, thus disturbing the worship of other churches, and the extreme difficulty of securing a suitable place along the river, were reasons that would justify the construction of a baptistery within the meeting-house. On the twenty-third of June, 1847, therefore, the church authorized the Board of Trustees to erect a baptistery, with necessary rooms adjoining. They immediately entered upon the work, and caused a building to be erected in the rear of the meeting-house, containing two rooms and the pulpit, under which was placed the baptistery.

While these alterations were taking place, the pastor was sojourning in Europe. There his health greatly improved, and he visited the birthplace and grave of John Bunyan, and many other places frequented by that good and remarkable man—a fact that accounts, in part, for the success of brother Remington's series of lectures on Bunyan and the Pilgrim's Progress, delivered after his return.

It should be remarked that the first discourse delivered by the pastor in the new pulpit, was founded on Nehemiah, viii. 4: "And Ezra, the scribe, stood upon a pulpit of wood which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam." The appropriateness of the text to the circumstances under which the discourse was delivered, was somewhat remarkable.

It is worthy of notice also, that a copy of their large illustrated Bible was presented for pulpit use by Harper & Brothers, and the church acknowledged their courtesy in a suitable manner.—One of the first persons baptized in the meeting-house was brother D. H. Miller, who was licensed to preach on the 4th of April, 1847. Five persons were immersed in the new baptistery on the first Sabbath of November. In the summer of this year heaters were substituted for stoves, and the next year new pews were put in at a cost of $1,650. These changes greatly improved our meeting-house.

The winter having now come, and the providences of God opening the way, the church resolved, on the evening of the 24th of December, "that relying on the great Head of the Church for a blessing on their efforts, they would, commencing with the new year, hold a series of religious meetings every evening except Saturday, so long as the providence of God might seem to justify the same." A preparatory resolution had been passed on the 22d, "that the first Monday of the new year should be observed as a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer, for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the church and the world." As the result of these means put forth, three persons were baptized upon the first Lord's day in January, 1848, and on the evening of the 31st, twelve persons related their Christian experiences and were received for baptism. The work now went forward; twelve persons were baptized on the last Sabbath in February, and eight on the first Sabbath in March.

The number of baptisms during Mr. Remington's ministry was two hundred and eleven (211), the total received to our fellowship amounted to three hundred and thirty (330); and though we numbered five hundred and twenty-eight (528) when he left us, only one hundred and seventy-eight of them were members with us when he took charge. These facts show how soon a church would die without constant additions from the world around. These continual fluctuating and changes do not, however, weaken the cause at large. Many colonies and members have gone out from this body to constitute and strengthen other churches, and scores have left us for the better land.

In the letter to the Hudson River Association, for the year 1848, the death of Deacon James Cowan was announced. Brother Cowan was a native of the north of Ireland, where his childhood and youth were spent, and where he was trained by pious parents for the service of the Lord. In the year 1800 he emigrated to this country, and was for some years a teacher in the Sabbath school connected with the church of which Rev. J. Chase was the pastor. Being once invited to open the exercises of the school with prayer, he with great mortification, declined—a circumstance which led him immediately to make up his mind to be a Christian. This resolution he by divine grace put in practice, and in April, 1827, he came before the Union Church and related the Lord's dealings with his soul. His baptism was administered by Elder Eastman, on the first Sabbath in March, in the North River. From this time until the day of his death his labors were abundant. For seventeen years he was connected with the Sabbath school, thirteen of which he bore the responsibilities of the office of superintendent; and although he was released from these severe cares for the four years preceding his death, he, nevertheless, lost none of the lively interest which he had ever manifested in the welfare of children. The last words he uttered a few moments before his departure bear witness to this. "Tell the Sunday-school teachers," said he, "to be faithful. Tell the church and the pastor to be faithful." He was a member of the first Board of Trustees ever elected by this congregation. During the many years in which he served his brethren in this capacity, his integrity, prudence and correct business habits were remarkable. As a deacon, he was faithful to his brethren and his pastor, and as a church clerk, he was prompt, careful, and accurate to the most minute particular. The church was bereaved in his death, but they were rejoiced in the continued grace manifested in his last moments, and in the evidence he gave of his adoption into the family of Christ. A series of resolutions was passed at the church meeting held April 28th, which, considering his well-ordered life as a legacy to Zion, the church ordered to be placed upon the records. His companion still lives to mourn his loss, and continues to look forward with the Christian's hope, to the time when they shall be reunited. Brother Cowan was the only officer of the church who has died while in its service.

For some years preceding his decease, brother C. had not enjoyed robust health, but on the Sabbath of the week in which he died, he was in his place as usual. On the following Sunday the meeting-house was crowded on the occasion of his funeral.

In June, 1849, Rev. John Pettes, a brother greatly beloved, was removed by death; and we lost two excellent brethren by the cholera in the summer of the same year.

On the evening of July 10th, 1850, a deeply interesting farewell missionary meeting was held in our house of worship. It was the eve of the departure of Rev. Eugenio Kincaid and Dr. Dawson for Burmah. In the course of his remarks, brother Kincaid said: "I was born in the northern part of this State, near the St. Lawrence. When quite a lad, I had a strong desire to obtain an education. I asked my pastor if he knew any learned minister of the Baptist denomination. He informed me that there was one by the name of Hascall, residing somewhere out in Madison County. We got our best, though imperfect, map of the State, and ascertained its location, and with a bundle under my arm, I started off, one hundred miles on foot, to find the place. While pursuing my studies at Hamilton, under elder Hascall, I heard a sermon from a returned missionary, Rev. Luther Rice. I then resolved, before he was half through with his sermon, that if the Lord would open the way, I would become a missionary. I went to Burmah, and remained there thirteen years. If, in my first going out, there was anything like romance in it, I am certain there is none now. We know where we go, and what trials we shall be called to endure. We know not that anything new can happen to us. I have spent many happy days with Christians in my native land, but never was I more happy than when upon the banks of the Irrawaddy, far away from civilized society, and surrounded by pagan darkness. We go six hundred and fifty miles beyond any missionary station and from a post-office, in the heart of the Burman Empire.

“My dear Christian friends, we shall probably never see your faces again in the flesh. We shall often, when far away, visit, in imagination, your dwellings, meet in your public assemblies, bow with you at your family altars, and sit with you at your tables. Then pray for us. Farewell!”

He was followed by Dr. Dawson, who said: “In 1830, while on heathen shores, I heard a sermon from a missionary, and when going from the meeting, putting his hand upon my shoulder, the missionary remarked, ‘My lad, you are young, but not too young to serve God.’ That remark was the means of leading me to Christ. And now, how mysterious the Providence that I should be permitted to return in company with the same missionary.”

Rev. S. H. Cone, D.D., then said: “At the request of this Church, and also of the Board of the Missionary Union, I arise to address a few words to you. Twenty years ago you preached in the old Oliver street meeting-house, upon the eve of your departure for the heathen. Taking your text from Ephesians, you dwelt upon the distinguishing doctrine of grace. We rejoiced that you were going far hence to preach such a Gospel. I remember well while you were preaching at that time how the perspiration poured from your face. I slipped a white handkerchief having my name marked on it in full into your hand, with which you wiped away the tears and big drops, and, apparently refreshed, continued your discourse with new vigor. After sermon you handed me the handkerchief. I said no; it is not mine. Brother Kincaid tells me he has that handkerchief still. You say there is no poetry in the work now. Why, my brother, it is all poetry. Did you not preach to us last Sabbath morning from these words, 'Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession.' Do we not read, 'They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.' Is not all this poetry—the poetry of the Bible? What shall I say in parting with you, my brother? The Lord Jesus Christ be with you; when you come to see the heathen land, you will need the Lord Jesus Christ with you. Though you go six hundred and fifty miles beyond any missionary, and into the heart of Burmah, yet if you have the Lord Jesus Christ with you, you will have nothing to fear." Then taking them by the hand, he said: "I bid you farewell. If you were my own son," said he to brother Kincaid, "I could not feel a deeper interest in you. It will be but a short time before we shall shake hands on the battlements of the celestial city. Twenty years ago I said we should not meet again. I thought so then; I am very sure of it now. I am going soon to my narrow home. Farewell!"

Rev. John Dowling, D.D., then read the 105th hymn of the Supplement to the Psalmist (by the missionary Sutton):

"Hail! sweetest, dearest tie, that binds

Our glowing hearts in one;

Hail! sacred hope that turns our minds

To harmony divine.

It is the hope, the blissful hope,
Which Jesus' grace has given—
The hope, when days and years are past,
We all shall meet in heaven!"

The entire congregation rose and sung this hymn with deep feeling, and after taking up the collection, which amounted to some seventy dollars, the benediction was pronounced by brother Kincaid.

The words of Dr. Cone were lamentably true. He passed away from the scenes of his toil before brother Kincaid revisited his native land.

The pastor, who was with brother Benedict when he died, preached a suitable discourse upon the subject, November 26th, 1848, from Daniel xii. 3. "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." Mrs. Elizabeth Noe, one of our constituent members, departed June 10th, 1848, in the 65th year of her age, and the 42d of her Christian pilgrimage. Miss Malvina Harris, and others greatly beloved, passed away from time to time, and on Sabbath morning, December 7, 1851,

Mrs. Eliza Ann Remington, wife of our pastor, deceased, after a long and painful illness. Her funeral was attended in the meeting-house on Tuesday by an immense crowd of sympathizing friends. The Rev. Thomas Armitage preached on the occasion, by request of the deceased, from 1 Peter, i. 3, 4, 5. Her remains were removed to Greenwood.

Soon after this event, on the 24th of December, the pastor tendered his resignation, and his connection with this church terminated February 1st, 1852. His farewell sermon was preached from Phil. i. 27, and the church voted a cordial expression of their fraternal feeling for brother Remington, in a letter from which the following extracts are taken :

“DEAR BROTHER: . . . In parting with you, we rejoice to know that the kindest feeling exists between pastor and people, and we only become reconciled to your leaving us from the fact that you feel fully persuaded that the Master has a more important work for you in another part of his vineyard. . . . In surveying the past, we well remember the discouraging prospects which attended your coming among us. . . . We were then just passing through severe trials; our former pastor leaving us and taking with him a colony of above one hundred of our number, and one-fourth of our congregation. . . . Our house of worship was, however, soon filled with attentive hearers, and many happy converts were added to us. . . . And now, dear brother, in parting with you, we are happy that, as we have lived together in peace and harmony, so we part. Our prayers go with you to your new field of labor. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit evermore. Amen."

On the 15th of May, 1852, we lost a lovely young Christian brother in the death of Washington Lewis. While health enabled him, he was an efficient and faithful Sunday-School teacher, but it was soon evident that he was fading away. Some time was spent in Georgia for the benefit of his health, and he also visited the South of Europe, but all in vain. He died in great peace, the pastor being with him, and closing his eyes. On Sunday the young men bore his body to the meeting-house, and brother R. preached from 1 John, iii. 2. The body was placed in front of the pulpit, where so many loved ones have lain, and the entire congregation passed around to take the farewell look. His remains repose in the beautiful cemetery in Second street, but his ransomed spirit has, we believe, ascended to its Father and its God.

From New York, brother Remington went to Philadelphia, and took charge of the Third Baptist Church in that city. After a pastorate of some two years in Philadelphia,* he removed to East Brooklyn, and assumed the pastoral care of that church, to which he ministered nearly five years. In the spring of 1859 he resigned, spent a few months with the church at Gloversville, N. Y., and then accepted the unanimous call of the Mount Olivet Baptist Church in this city.

* From Philadelphia brother Remington went to Louisville, Kentucky, where he spent a few months.

PERIOD V.

MINISTRY OF THE REV. EDWARD T. HISCOX, D.D.,

SEPTEMBER 1ST, 1852.

AGAIN was the church without a pastor for the period of seven months, the first two of which were well supplied by Rev. Marvin W. Eastwood; and we have reason to believe that under his labors, souls were added to the Lord as well as to the church. As he would not entertain a call, the body looked elsewhere for a spiritual head, and on the first of March an invitation was extended to Rev. D. G. Corey, of Utica, who had been with us for a brief period. But Mr. C. preferred to remain at his old post, and the attention of the church was next directed to the Rev. E. T. Hiscox, of Norwich, Connecticut. At a meeting of the members, held April 25th, 1852, the committee on pastor recommended that brother H. be chosen as our future minister, and accordingly a call was ordered by a unanimous vote. It was also agreed that the salary should be $1,500 per annum, instead of $1,200, as formerly. This invitation was accepted by brother Hiscox, June 4th, and he entered upon the discharge of his duties on the first of September: it should be stated, however, that he spent a number of Sabbaths with us previous to that date, and baptized several into the fellowship of the church.

Edward Thurston Hiscox, was born August 24th, 1814, in the town of Westerly, Rhode Island. He remained at home on the paternal estate until thirteen years of age, when he accepted the invitation of an elder brother, residing in another part of the State, and with him he spent several years, visiting home only at occasional intervals. He was religiously instructed from his infancy, his mother being a pious member of the Society of Friends, and his father, with his ancestors for many generations, belonging to the Seventh-day Baptist connection. Indeed, the Rev. William Hiscox was the first pastor of the first church of that denomination in this country. His son, Rev. Thomas Hiscox, having been educated in England, succeeded his father, and was an honored and influential minister of the Gospel. The advantages for obtaining an education which the young Edward enjoyed, were such as the children of that day possessed, and they were extremely limited. He was fond of reading and study, however, from an early period of childhood, and eagerly perused the few books within his reach. For some years after he left home he had access to a considerable library, and though he enjoyed but little leisure time, he accomplished a wide range of general reading. From the very nature of the case, these efforts were not critical and systematic, being prosecuted by himself without teacher, associate, or guide; and, to a great extent, in hours taken from needful rest. Still, whatever gain or progress in knowledge was made in after years, much must be referred to this period of his life. It was during these years that the ground was examined, the foundation laid, and many of the scattered materials gathered for subsequent use.

At length the way was opened to gratify a long-cherished desire to pursue a more systematic course of study; and by the generous aid of an older brother, he entered the Plainfield Academy, in Connecticut, then and for many years one of the best high-schools in New England. His classmates were young men fitting for college, and with them he pursued the classics and other required studies, and with such success, that at the close of the first year he was prepared to enter college himself. But obstacles arose; his sight was much impaired by too close application, especially at night; and for two years any considerable effort at reading or study was impracticable. And besides, the want of the necessary pecuniary means seemed to raise a barrier to his further progress, even if nothing else should prevent. But out of all this darkness light arose. The religious training of his earlier years began to show its results, and at the age of fifteen he obtained satisfactory evidence of his conversion. He was away from home at the time, and surrounded by circumstances calculated to discourage even a convert of maturer age. Four years passed before he made a public profession of his faith; but in September, 1834, he was baptized into the fellowship of the First Baptist Church at Wakefield, R. I., by the Rev. Flavel Shurtleff, pastor. Immediately after uniting with the church, he commenced attending and taking part in all social religious meetings accessible to him. In this way, his talent for usefulness in the church was developed; and thoughts of the Gospel ministry, which had possessed his mind at intervals for a long period, became more deep and frequent. Still, feeling himself entirely unfit for the work, he was induced to engage in teaching, and for a year he devoted his energies in that direction. At the expiration of that time, one of his brothers, who was engaged in a lucrative business, placed an establishment at the young man's disposal, with all the capital necessary to command success. Though not to his mind, the generous offer of his brother proved too tempting, and he accepted it. But before the expiration of the first year, the crisis of 1837 came on the flattering prospects of pecuniary success were blasted, and he closed his business without profits and without regrets. In February, 1838, he received a license from the church at Wakefield, to preach the Gospel. For a few months he gave himself to study, and then he was invited to the charge of the male department of a boarding-school about to be established in Lebanon Springs, N. Y. This invitation was accepted, but at the expiration of six months he was requested to supply the pulpit of the Baptist Church in that place, the pastor having removed. After preaching there for half a year, he resolved to go to Hamilton; and entering nearly a year in advance, he completed his collegiate course in the summer of 1843. The winter following he spent in supplying a church in the eastern part of Connecticut, and in the spring of 1844 he accepted a call to become the pastor of the First Baptist Church in Westerly, R. I., his native town, the church having given him a similar invitation the year previous. On the first of May, 1844, one month after his settlement, he was married to Miss Caroline Orne, of New Hampshire, a graduate of Mrs. Willard's celebrated seminary at Troy. During the three years of a most happy pastorate at Westerly, a commodious and pleasant meeting-house was built, and almost entirely paid for; the church enjoyed an interesting revival, took a position in advance of the other churches in the place, and became one of the largest and strongest in the rural part of the State. At length he accepted the invitation of the Central Baptist Church in Norwich, Connecticut; and he commenced his labors in that beautiful city April 1st, 1847. At that time the church was much embarrassed by a heavy debt, contracted in building their meeting-house; but in the course of three years this was paid off, the house of worship greatly improved, and both the church and congregation considerably increased. His pastorate there extended over a period of five years and a half, and then he accepted the unanimous call of the Stanton street Church, removed to the city of New York, and entered upon the pastoral care of the church, September 1st, 1852.

Our meeting-house had just been thoroughly cleaned and painted, both within and without, so as to present a pleasing and inviting appearance. Attention was now given to revising the list of members, and a large number having been entirely lost sight of, seventy-three were dropped from the roll; and although this considerably diminished the nominal membership, the real strength and efficiency of the body were, of course, unimpaired.

In 1853, a company of brethren and sisters, nearly one hundred in number, who had lost their standing in a sister church, on account of some misunderstanding, and, as they believed, without sufficient cause, applied to us for admission. A considerable part of this company had formerly been connected with this church. The case appeared an unusual one, and excited not a little public interest. All other attempts having failed, a mutual council was convened, and several sessions were held, without arriving at any definite result, except the appointment of a committee to which the whole subject was referred. After waiting a long time in vain, and making many ineffectual efforts to come to some conclusion, and secure an adjustment of the matter, they notified the committee that, as they were unwilling to remain any longer deprived of religious privileges, they should apply to some other churches for admission. It should be stated that they had now been out of the church about two years, and destitute, to a great degree, of those privileges which they highly prized.

More than seventy of this company, accordingly, applied to us in May, 1854, for admission. The church, with great care and deliberation, having informed itself by a committee that these individuals sustained good Christian characters, as certified also by the members of the body with which they had formerly been connected, and also ascertaining that they were not at this time members of any church, we proceeded to hear them individually relate their Christian experiences, on which they were received to our fellowship. When it is stated that the widow and only daughter of the beloved Benedict, were among them, that others had been constituent members of this church, and that some had been office-bearers with us, it will not be thought strange that we gave them a hearty welcome to their former home. Nor have we been disappointed in the confidence we reposed in them.

Toward our sister church we have never ceased to exercise both brotherly kindness and charity. We have dismissed members to join that body, and received members from it, just as cordially as before the events referred to; and we are firm in the belief that a brighter day will dawn when wiser counsels will prevail, and all the old-time friendship be restored.

Early in the summer of 1855 our house of worship was newly carpeted and otherwise improved; and on the 19th and 20th days of June, the Hudson River Association, South, held their annual meeting with us. Rev. E. L. Magoon was chosen moderator, and the session was eminently pleasant and profitable. The pastor's salary was increased to $2,000 per annum, on the 29th of October, and that sum is still paid.

On the 14th of July we lost by death Mrs. Mary S. Randall, aged 68 years. She was baptized by the late Rev. Dr. Sharp, of Boston, August 19th, 1819. She was always kind, diligent and faithful—a mother in Israel. This year witnessed another bereavement of an impressive character. One of our young brethren, Francis H. Palmer, an esteemed member of the Bible-class and of the Young Men's Mission Society, was accidentally drowned on the afternoon of September 15th. The evening before he had filled his place in the prayer-meeting, and it can consistently be said that he was "faithful unto death." His funeral was attended in the meeting-house on Sabbath afternoon, and the pastor preached an affecting discourse to the solemn assembly.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Mangam also departed this life November 28th, 1855. She, with her husband, brother Wm. D. Mangam, was baptized by Rev. David Bellamy on the first Sabbath in February, 1844. After uniting with the church she grew rapidly in grace, and manifested her inward spiritual life by going about like her Saviour doing good. The most marked feature of her character was benevolence; and being fortunately blessed with the means of charity, she used these with a discernment and prudence that, combined with her consistent life and well-timed religious advice, gladdened the hearts of the needy, while it encouraged assiduity in the recipient, and was owned of God to the conversion of souls. In her death the poor lost a friend, the church a faithful sister, and our female benevolent societies a firm supporter and an active member.

In June, 1856, Edward Francis Davis, another member of the Bible-class, was summoned from among us under circumstances of peculiar interest. He was in delicate health, but having experienced the mercy of God, he desired to unite with the church. His name was announced as a candidate for baptism; but his disease progressed so rapidly that he was unable to make a public profession of his faith. But he died in sweet peace, and has doubtless attained the saints' everlasting rest. Both of these deaths were improved by suitable services before the Young Men's Mission Society, with which they had been connected. With them we can say most emphatically, "IT IS WELL!"

Early in the autumn of 1856, an unusual seriousness was apparent in the congregation; the regular meetings were well attended and increasingly interesting. The Rev. John Blain, of Rhode Island, spent several weeks with the church, and a gracious revival of religion was enjoyed for many months. The associational letter for June, 1857, describes the state of feeling in the body as follows:

“With unfeigned gratitude to the great Head of the church for the blessings of another year, we this day record the goodness of our Heavenly Father. The past year has been a bright one in our history, and it is our privilege to inform you that God has graciously visited us with the abundant outpouring of his spirit. For several months our congregation has shown a marked seriousness; the powers of the world to come have moved many hearts, and while we have welcomed no less than seventy-one to the ordinance of baptism, others are yet waiting to go forward, and a number of anxious souls are seeking the good part. Time forbids that we should attempt to describe the happy seasons we have enjoyed; God has graciously blessed the efforts put forth, and has again made the place of his feet glorious.”

At the regular church meeting, April 22d,

1857, brother C. B. Stout, who had for some time officiated as clerk pro tempore, was chosen to fill the office made vacant by the resignation of brother R. C. Akerly. As brother S. positively refused to assume the entire responsibility, the church voted to elect two clerks, and proceeded, on the 6th of May, to choose C. B. Stout and Thomas J. Grout, by a unanimous vote. They immediately entered upon the discharge of their duties, and continue in office still; theirs being only the seventh incumbency, in that office, through her entire history of more than thirty-six years. Brother Cowan died while holding the office, and the others resigned in consequence of removal, or other causes preventing them from giving the necessary attention to the duties of the station. It may well be doubted whether any but office-bearers realize the demands upon time, patience, and money, required to serve a church faithfully. Let the official brethren always share in the sympathies and prayers of the body.

The years 1857* and 1858 were marked by

* The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred many manifestations of God's presence and power, and converts were continually added to the church. At the meeting of the Association in June, 1858, the church reported the baptism of seventy-two persons, and the total membership as amounting to five hundred and fifty-five—larger than for several years. These seasons were also prosperous ones to the Young Men's Mission Society, so that their annual reports speak of constantly increasing contributions.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees in January, 1858, the clerk suggested the propriety of taking some steps for the removal of the church debt, then amounting to $6,500; and after a full discussion of the subject, it was referred to a committee, consisting of C. B. Stout, George Sibell, and John F. Zebley, to mature and present a plan. At the next meeting, they offered a report embracing such a plan, which was adopted by a unanimous vote, and the Trustees themselves promptly subscribed $3,000, almost half the amount needed. A circular was then issued upon the pastor in the summer of this year, by Shurtleff College, Ill.

to the members of the church and congregation, inviting them to meet the Trustees in the meeting-house on the evening of March 1st, to consider the subject. The meeting was well attended, the plan cordially approved, and nearly money enough was subscribed to provide for the entire indebtedness. The amount was subsequently made up; more than half of it is now paid, and we expect to begin the year 1860 free from debt.

The church having voted in December last that the number of deacons should hereafter be seven, a special church meeting was held on Wednesday evening, March 15th, 1859, to choose two to complete the number. A large meeting convened, an hour was spent in devotional exercises, and then the church chose brother Joshua Davenport and brother John A. Green to fill the office. The Board of Deacons is now composed of the following brethren: Humphrey Phelps, elected December 23d, 1829; David Bailie, July 27th, 1836; William D. Mangam, October 27th, 1852; Richard E. Peterson, September 26th, 1855; William Beach, September 26th, 1855;

Joshua Davenport, March 15th, 1859; John A. Green, March 15, 1859.

Sunday, March 6th, 1859, being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of our house of worship, was occupied with special services having reference to that event. Rev. Archibald Maclay, D.D., who preached the first sermon in our meeting-house, March 2d, 1834, preached in the morning with considerable vigor, although he had passed his fourscore years. In the afternoon our pastor gave an interesting account of the rise and progress of the church, and then we celebrated the Lord's Supper, Rev. B. M. Hill, D.D., assisting the pastor. The day was delightful, and it was remarked by the elder brethren that more communicants were present than at any time since the colony went out with brother Benedict in 1841. Nearly all the seats in the lower part of the house were filled.

In the evening, Rev. C. G. Somers, D.D., who officiated at the evening service a quarter of a century since, gave many interesting reminiscences of the past. So closed a day of grateful commemoration, and we thankfully record that it found the church in peace and prosperity.

It should be remarked that at the time our meeting-house was opened there was no other of our denomination north of it on Manhattan Island; and at the present time there is no Baptist meeting-house* south of us which was occupied by the denomination when our house was erected.

For some time none of our members have been set apart to the work of the ministry, but we have now three promising young brethren preparing to preach the everlasting Gospel. Brethren Wm. S. Apsey, Wm. McIntyre, and Owen Williams, were licensed to preach September 30th, 1859.

At the regular church meeting in the same month, the committee who had been appointed to have printed another supply of the Articles of Faith and the Covenant, reported in favor of certain amendments, which were adopted, and at the close of the prayer-meeting the following Friday evening, the church instructed the committee to have a thousand copies printed. The Articles and Covenant then adopted being, with the exception of some slight alterations, the same as we have used since the time of brother Eastman, are as follows :

A DECLARATION OF GOSPEL TRUTH,

According to the Views of the Stanton street Baptist Church in the City of New York.

WE believe the Holy Scriptures to have been written by men divinely inspired, and that they form a perfect rule of faith and practice.

We believe that the revelation thus made from God, teaches the following great truths :

Proofs.

2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. " All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Pet. i. 21. 1 Pet. i. 10, 11. 2 Sam. xxiii. 2.

ARTICLE I.

The existence of one only living and true God,
(a) infinite in every natural and moral excellence, the uncreated and unchangeable (b) Creator, (c) Preserver, and Ruler of all things; and that he has revealed himself under the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost (d) the same in essence, and equal in every divine perfection, and that he deserves and requires our supreme love, our trust, and our reverent obedience.

Proofs.

(a) 1 Tim. ii. 5. "For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." Mark, xii. 32. James, ii. 19. Isa. xlvi. 9. Rom. i. 20.

(b) Mal. iii. 6. "For I am the Lord: I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." James, i. 17.

(c) Gen. i. 1. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Col. i. 15, 16, 17.

(d) Matt. xxviii. 19. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." 1 John, v. 7. Col. ii. 9. John, v. 23. Acts, v. 3.

ARTICLE II.

That man was originally created holy; (e) but by willfully violating the law of his Maker (f) he fell from that state—an entire alienation of the heart from God succeeded, and all communion with him was lost; (g) and, as by divine appointment Adam was the representative of all his posterity, we in him (h) became wholly defiled and dead in trespasses and sins, so that by nature we are indisposed to good and inclined to evil; exposed to the penalties of the law, and are children of wrath, subjects of death, and all other miseries, temporal, spiritual and eternal. (i.)

Proofs.

(e) Gen. i. 26, 27. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Eccl. vii. 29.

(f) Gen. iii. 6. "And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof and did eat; and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat."

(g) Ps. xiv. 3. "They are all gone aside, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." Gen. iii. 24. Gen. vi. 5. Gen. viii. 21.

(h) Rom. v. 12. "Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned," etc.

(i) Eph. ii. 1. "And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins." 1 Cor. ii. 14. Eph. ii. 3. Gal. iii. 10. Rom. vi. 23. Rev. xiv. 11. Matt. xxv. 46.

ARTICLE III.

That the only way of deliverance from this state of guilt and ruin, is through the free grace and mercy of God, bestowing repentance and remission of sins by the one Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus; (j)—and that all who are thus brought to repentance, shall be kept by his power through faith unto salvation—and that nothing can separate them from the love of God; the sure and final proof of their genuine faith consisting in the continuance of their attachment and obedience to Christ, to the end of this their present life. (k)

Proofs.

(j) Acts, iv. 12. "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." John, iii. 16. Isa. liii. 4, 8. Eph. ii. 8. Tit. iii. 5. Acts, v. 31. Acts, x. 43. Acts, xi. 18. 1 Tim. ii. 5.

(k) 1 Pet. i. 5. "Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time." John, x. 28, 29. John, xvii. 24. John, vi. 58. Rom. viii. 37, 39, etc.

ARTICLE IV.

That the blessings of salvation are made free to all by the Gospel; (l) that it is the immediate duty of all to accept them by a cordial and obedient faith; (m) and nothing prevents the salvation of the greatest sinner on earth except his own voluntary refusal to submit to the Lord Jesus Christ, (n) which refusal, if persisted in, will subject him to an aggravated condemnation. (o)

Proofs.

(l) Rev. xxii. 17. "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." Isa. lv. 1. Luke, xiv. 17.

(m) Rom. xvi. 26. "The Gospel—according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith." Mark, i. 15. Acts, xvii. 30. Rom. i. 16.

(n) John, v. 40. "And ye will not come unto me that ye might have life. Matt. xxiii. 37. Rom. ix. 32. Acts, xiii. 46. Prov. i. 24.

(o) John, iii. 19. "And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." Matt. xi. 20. Luke, xix. 27. 2 Thess. i. 8.

ARTICLE V.

That election is the gracious purpose of God, according to which he regenerates, sanctifies and saves sinners; (p) that being perfectly consistent with the free agency of man, it comprehends all the means in connection with the end; (q) that it is a most glorious display of God's sovereign goodness, being infinitely wise, holy, and unchangeable; (r) that it utterly excludes boasting, and promotes humility, prayer, praise, and trust in God, and active imitation of his free mercy; (s) that it encourages the use of means in the highest degree; (t) that it is ascertained by its effects in all who believe the Gospel, (u) is the foundation of Christian assurance, (v) and that to ascertain it with regard to ourselves, demands and deserves our utmost diligence. (w)

Proofs.

(p) 2 Tim. i. 8, 9. "Who hath saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given in Christ Jesus before the world began." Eph. i. 3, 14. 1 Pet. i. 1, 2. "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God." Rom. xi. 5, 6. John, xv. 16. 1 John, iv. 19.

(g) 2 Thess. ii. 13, 14. "Because God hath from the beginning chosen you unto salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth," etc. Acts, xiii. 48. John, x. 16. Acts, xv. 14.

(r) Exod. xxxiii. 18, 19. "And Moses said, I beseech thee, show me thy glory. And he said, I will cause all my goodness to pass before thee, and will proclaim the name of the Lord before thee; and will be gracious to whom I will be gracious, and will show mercy on whom I will show mercy." Matt. xx. 15. Eph. i. 11. Rom. ix. 23, 24. Jer. xxxi. 3. Rom. xi. 28, 29. James, i. 17, 18.

(s) 1 Cor. iv. 7. "For who maketh thee to differ from another?" 1 Cor. i. 26, 31. Rom. iii. 27. Rom. iv. 16. Col. iii. 12. 1 Cor. iii. 5, 7. 1 Cor. xv. 10. 1 Pet. v. 10. 1 Thess. ii. 13. 1 Pet. ii. 9. Luke, xviii. 7. John, xv. 16. 1 Thess. ii. 12.

(t) 2 Tim. ii. 10. "Therefore I endure all things for the elect's sake, that they also may obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory." 1 Cor. ix. 22. Rom. viii. 28, 30. John vi. 37, 40.

(u) 1 Thess. iv. 10. "Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God: for our Gospel came unto you, not in word only, but in power," etc.

(v) Rom. viii. 29, 30. "Whom he did foreknow he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first born among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified," etc. Isa. xlii. 16. Rom. xi. 29.

(w) 2 Pet. i. 10, 11. "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things ye shall never fail; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Phil. iii. 12. Heb. vi. 11.

ARTICLE VI.

That those who die in infancy before they are capable of distinguishing between good and evil, are saved through the merits of Christ, by regeneration effected by the Spirit of God.

Proofs.

2 Sam. xii. 23. "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." Deut. i. 39. Matt. xviii. 10.

Mark, x. 13, 14. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." Luke, xviii. 16, 17.

ARTICLE VII.

That although Christ has become the end of the law for righteousness to all believers, (x) it is yet their indispensable duty, and will, from the nature of regeneration, become their delight, (y) to observe the moral law, and all the precepts and ordinances which Christ and his Apostles have, by express command, or by their own examples, made a rule of Christian conduct.

Proofs.

(x) Rom. x. 4. "For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth."

(y) Rom. xiii. 8, 10. Matt. v. 17, 19. James, ii. 8, 11. Rom. vii. 22. 1-Cor. ix. 21. Rom. iii. 31. Rom. vii. 12. Ps. cxix. 97.

ARTICLE VIII.

That the only proper subjects of the ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper are professed believers; (z) that Baptism is properly administered by immersion only, (aa) and is, by scriptural example, a prerequisite to communion at the Lord's Table; and that both Baptism and the Lord's Supper are of perpetual obligation.

Proofs.

(z) Matt. iii. 5, 6. "Then went out to him Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins." Matt. iii. 7, 12. Mark, i. 5. Matt. xxviii. 19. Luke, iii. 8. Acts, ii. 38, 42.

(aa) Matt. iii. 16. "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water." Acts, viii. 38, 39. "And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch; and he baptized him, and when they were come up out of the water," etc. Acts, x. 47, 48. Rom. vi. 3, 5. Acts, xviii. 8. Col. ii. 12. 1 Pet. iii. 21.

ARTICLE IX.

That the first day of the week should be hallowed as the Christian (bb) Sabbath, or Lord's day, in commemoration of the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead, by resting from all secular employment, and devoting the day to private and public worship, and religious instruction.

Proofs.

(bb) Exodus, xx. 8. "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Matt. xxviii. 1, 9. Mark, xvi. 1, 8. Luke, xxiv. 1, 7. John xx. 1, 8. Acts, xvi. 13. Rev. i. 10.

ARTICLE X.

That there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust, (cc) and that we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ to receive according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or evil, (dd)

when the wicked will go away in everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal. (ee)

Proofs.

(cc) Acts, xxiv. 15. "That there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

(dd) 2 Cor. v. 10. "For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."

(ee) Matt. xxv. 46. "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." Mark, xii. 24-27. John, xi. 25, 26. 2 Thess. i. 9. Rev. vii. 14-17. Rev. xxii. 11, 12.

COVENANT.

As we trust we have, by divine grace, been brought to embrace the Lord Jesus Christ, and to give ourselves up to him; so we do now solemnly covenant with each other (as God shall enable us), to walk together in brotherly love, that we will exercise a Christian care and watchfulness over each other, and faithfully warn, exhort, and admonish our brethren, as the case may require—that we will not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, nor omit the great duty of prayer, both for ourselves and others—that we will participate in each other's joys, and endeavor with tenderness and sympathy to bear each other's burdens and sorrows—that we will seek divine aid to enable us to walk circumspectly and watchfully in the world, denying ungodliness and every worldly lust—that we will strive together for the support of a faithful and evangelical ministry among us, as well as for the spread of the Gospel throughout the world, and through life, amidst evil report and good report, seek to live to the glory of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light.

The autumn of 1859 witnessed an increase of interest among the members; the meetings were more fully attended than usual, and a spirit of renewed devotion was manifest. As many as eighty persons have arisen in a single evening, and testified to the goodness of the Redeemer. The emotion of brotherly love is still in lively exercise; some among us are anxious about their souls ; the Sunday-school and Bible Classes are in a thriving condition, and the church has abundant reason for gratitude that God is still with us.

It might be interesting to add that, during our history, about thirty of our members have given themselves to the work of the ministry. Attention is also called to "The Baptist Church Directory," a guide to the doctrines, discipline, officers, ordinances, and customs of Baptist churches, by Rev. E. T. Hiscox, D.D. This excellent volume is issued in the same style as the present work, and by the same publishers ; and it is earnestly commended to the favorable notice of all.

The present superintendent of the Sunday-school is Deacon William D. Mangam ; Deacon Richard E. Peterson is secretary, and Deacon H. Phelps has charge of the infant department. Two adult Bible-classes are maintained, in addition to those in the Sunday-school. The present number of teachers is 48, and of scholars, 531. Our school has had but three superintendents since the opening of our meeting-house in 1834, viz., Deacon James Cowan, Deacon David Bailie, and the present incumbent.

It may be of sufficient interest to add, that the prices of our pews remain as first fixed, more than a quarter of a century since: the choicest seat in the house rents for $20 per annum.

As it is nowhere stated in the preceding pages, we insert here the regular meetings of the church. We have three sermons on Sunday (except during a few weeks in the heat of summer, when two are given): at 10.30 A.M., 3 P.M., and at 7.30 P.M. We have a lecture every Tuesday evening and prayer-meeting every Friday evening throughout the year.

The present Board of Trustees is composed as follows: Charles Cooper, chairman; William D. Mangam, treasurer; and Charles B. Stout, Clerk; Paul Grout, Richard E. Peterson, Wm. H. Palmer, Thomas D. Smith, Levi H. Mace, and there is one vacancy.

With these events and remarks we conclude this part of our work. We have traced the history of the vine from its infancy, through early trials and struggles, to a period of fruitfulness and peace.

Well may we exclaim, in reviewing the past, "What hath God wrought!" Many of those,

"Whose names these records bear,"

have been summoned to join the church within the veil; and as they have been bidden away from the scenes of Christian labor and hope, so shall we also pass on to give account of the deeds done in the body. At the longest we have but a short time upon the earth, and all worthy motives combine to urge us so to spend the fleeting years as most to glorify our Father in Heaven. With many tears and sacrifices this post has been maintained in times past, and we should both labor and pray that, when we are gone, no vain or craven-hearted successors may surrender the ground consecrated by so many pious efforts, and so frequently made glorious by the presence of the Master. Rather let us pray that, on this beloved spot the banner of the cross may continue to wave, until the last sinner is converted, and the sun of time is set.
